1.2 Summary

The 7 Habits of Highly Effective People: Restoring the Character Ethic, first published in 1989, revised in 2004, is written by Stephen R. Covey.

Summary

- This is book for personal development and relationship management.
- In this book, the author used a top-down, inside-out approach to help the readers to develop effectiveness in their personal life and in their relationship with others.
- The effectiveness defined in this book lies in the balance of production (P) and production capacity (PC).
- This approach belongs to so called the character ethic approaches, which emphasizes that “there are basic principles of effective living, and that people can only experience true success and enduring happiness as they learn and integrate these principles into their basic character.”
- The author’s argument is that developing a principle center of ourselves is essential to form an effective, mature, independent individual, which becomes the foundation for trustworthy, interdependent relationships with others.
- The seven principles and the corresponding seven habits presented in this book are thus a part of a sequential development process. From top to down, from inside to outside, this process allows the reader to introspect, evaluate and then change their own paradigms of life and finally to live in harmony with their principles, their values in an ever-changing, challenging, interdependent environment.
- The ultimate goal for the readers to achieve is to form an upward spiral renewal process that helps the readers to continually develop themselves and to improve their relationships with other individuals.

1.3 Summary of Chapters

Summary of Chapters

1. Part 1: Paradigms and Principles. This part presents the main argument of the book, i.e. forming a principle-centered paradigm.

- (a) Chapter 1 Inside-Out.

This chapter presents the main approach of this book – the character ethic approach and compare it with the popular personality ethic approach. The author, who is restoring an old paradigm, argues that the behaviors and attitudes, the two main focuses on personality ethic trait, are secondary to character. Without correct principles and fundamental character strength, skills on behaviors and attitudes will fade quickly and our true self will resurface.

Then the author argues that through paradigm shift from personality ethics to character ethics, we will change our perspective, understanding and interpreting to the world and circumstances. This paradigm shift is via forming a principle-centered paradigm. Paradigm is our internal model of the world and principles are self-evident guidelines to human conduct with enduring values. In this book, the author argues that one individual's internal world model should live in harmony with the correct principles so that he/she can have a correct map to maximize the personal and interpersonal effectiveness.

(b) Chapter 2 The Seven Habits: an Overview.

This chapter introduces the definitions of habits and effectiveness, two keywords in the book's title. This chapter also presents the maturity continuum, which introduces the concept of dependent, independent and interdependent. The latter two are the focus on part 2 and part 3, respectively. The main point of this chapter is to argue that effectiveness lies in the balance of production and production capacity. Overall, this chapter is an introduction chapter and it provides a high-level overview of the topics discussed in the later chapters of the book.

2. Part 2: Private Victory. This part concerns about the personal self-development. The ultimate goal is to form an independent and matured character of our own. In particular, the author stated that a habit is defined as an intersection of knowledge, skill and desire. Then in the following three chapters, the author address the issues of desire (via our personal vision), knowledge (via our personal leadership) and skill (via our personal management). Note that skills come last, which reflect the author's perspective based on the character ethic approach.

This part correlates to the self-awareness and self-management part in emotional intelligence 2.0. But this book emphasize the development of characters not only behaviors.

(a) Chapter 3 Habit 1: Be Proactive – Principles of Personal Vision.

This chapter addresses the issue of “Desire” – “Do we want to lead an effective life?”. The author raised the readers' desire to commit to a paradigm shift in our character. It is argued that “We are the Creator.” In particular,

- we are responsible for our own life.
- we have freedom to choose our responses in our life.

And the Habit 1, being proactive means:

- taking initiatives, to act instead of being acted upon by others or environment;
- recognizing and taking responsibility;
- focus on Circle of Influence; only act when we have direct control or indirect control;
- live with things outside Circle of Influence, i.e. things that we have no control of;
- making and keeping commitments.

The author argued that human response are not purely reactive to the stimulus of our environment. We are also not a true reflection of our social mirror. To the opposite, we have freedom to make choice through four unique human endowments: Self-awareness, Imagination; Conscience; Independent Will. These four characteristics are the basis of the proposed proactivity model. Throughout the book, the proactive model and the four human endowments are repeatedly mentioned.

The concept of Circle of Influence vs. Circle of Concern is also impressive. By focusing on things we have control of we are able to motivate ourselves to act on them. The Circle of Influence is a central piece in the habit of Proactivity, as it directs our mind to consider “Which part i can work on?”. Note that not only our own personal life but also part of our interpersonal relationships lie within Circle of Influence, which is up to us to influence.

The habit of proactivity helps us to make commitments to start our transition to new paradigms. It gives us the initial force to push us forward.

(b) Chapter 4 Habit 2: Begin with the End in Mind – Principles of Personal Leadership.

This chapter addresses the issue of “Knowledge” – “What to do to lead an effective life and Why?” The author used the term “Begin with the End in Mind” which means that “envisioning a clear destination at the beginning of journey.” By knowing where are you going, you will have a better understanding of where are you now and whether or not you are heading in the right direction. The author encouraged us to use imagination and conscience to visualize and affirm an ideal image of ourselves in minds.

In this chapter, the main proposal is to develop a personal mission statement, a personal constitution. Such personal mission statement includes what you want to be, to do and the values or principles upon which your identity and your actions are based. And the personal mission statement is separated according to roles and goals, which provides structural directions to our personal mission. According to the author, “with unchanging principles, we created a fundamental paradigm of effective living”. Our personal mission statement is a manifesto of our ideal destinations in mind. It is our mental creation.

Behind the personal mission statement is our centers. In particular, our centers are the source of four life-support factors: security, guidance, wisdom and power. In order to write a personal mission statement, we need to identify our principle center, which is built upon the correct principles. By centering our life on correct principles, we put various other centers and roles in our life (self, family, spouse, work, money, friend, enemy etc.) into perspective and develop them in a balanced way. Note that these centers are at very center of our Circle of Influence.

Habit 2 is based on the principle of Personal Leadership. Personal leadership is “to determine the right things to do”. “We are more in need of a vision or destination and a compass and less in need of a road map.” Personal leadership defines the criterion on prioritization, which is the focus on Personal Management. According to the author, “Personal Leadership comes before Personal Management.” Effectiveness cannot be achieved if we are heading in the wrong direction.

Finally, the author suggested us to “take deep introspection, careful analysis, thoughtful expression, and often many rewrites” to produce the final form of our personal mission statement, and then review it regularly. The author also suggested us to continually develop our Personal Leadership by expanding our perspective with new experience, and by visualizing and affirming it with respect to our principles.

(c) Chapter 5 Habit 3: Put First Things First – Principles of Personal Management.

This chapter addresses the issue of “Skill” – “How to lead an effective life?” The answer to the question above can be summarized as

- Separating importance from urgency;
- Always prioritizing importance over urgency;
- Focus on important but Not urgent matters (Quadrant II);
- For Quadrant III or Quadrant IV, either say “No” or Delegate.

“What are important matters?” Importance is measured by how much the results will contribute to our goals, missions and values, which are identified in Habit 2. Leadership decides on the “first things” and management puts them first in routine activities.

The key in this chapter is “Quadrant II focus”. Quadrant I represents Crises, and crises act on you not vice versa. Thus Quadrant I is in effect out of our Circle of Influence. However, Quadrant II is within our Circle of Influence. We have freedom to determine when to do it and how to do it. Moreover, the more we work on Quadrant II the less we will face them in Quadrant I.

The Habit 3 can be described in one word “prioritization”. “How to prioritize Quadrant II?” The author’s answer is “By rejecting unimportant matters or delegate them to other skilled people.” That is, by taking time from Quadrant III and IV. Both rejection and delegation are result of fully understanding of our principles/values, and thus understanding what is really important to us. “The essence of effective time and life management is to organize and execute around balanced priorities.” In order to master Habit 3, we need to internalize Habit 2.

The final product in this chapter is a Quadrant II Self-Manager, who complete the work via

- Identifying Roles;
- Selecting Goals;
- Scheduling;
- Daily Adapting.

The objective of Quadrant II management is to keep our life effective.

- it should maintain integrity and coherence to our vision and mission.
- It should keep balance in our life between multiple roles and goals.
- The key is “not to prioritize what is on your schedule, but to schedule your priorities.”
- It maintains a “People” dimension, which subordinate of schedules to people.

Mastering the Skill (Habit 3) is the result of understanding the Desire (Habit 1) and the Knowledge (Habit 2). Only through deep understanding of our instinct values and goals do we define the importance and thus the Quadrant II. By choosing to prioritize Quadrant II, we utilize our Habit 1 (Proactivity). Finally through Proactivity, we reach effectiveness in time and life management.

3. Part 3: Public Victory. This part concerns about the interpersonal relationship management. From the author's perspective, effective interdependence can only be built on a foundation of true independence. Private Victory precedes Public Victory.

The ultimate goal is to raise the level of trusts among individuals. In the process of earning trusts, we adopt the motives of Win/Win interactions (Habit 4) and the skills of Empathic Communications (Habit 5). Finally, it results in a situation where all parties in a group obtain Synergy (Habit 6) in creative cooperations.

This part corresponds to the social awareness and relationship management in the Emotional Intelligence 2.0. It also covers the principled negotiations in Getting to Yes: Negotiating Agreement Without Giving In.

(a) Chapter 5 Paradigms of Interdependence.

This chapter discuss the paradigm of interdependence. Unlike the paradigm of independence, which involves development of principled center and then working from inside out to reach effective in personal life, the interdependence is built upon trusts among individuals. In this chapter, the author use the metaphor of “Emotional Bank Account” to describe the level of trusts accumulated between people.

The central point in this chapter is that our character, actions and communications would affect the amount of trusts that the other people have towards us. Such trusts and distrusts can be accumulated, which is described as “deposit” and “withdrawal”. The paradigms of interdependence is to maintain and earn people's trusts towards us.

“How to earn trust?” The author's suggestions can be summarized as the following

- Understanding the Individual;
- Attending to the Little Things;
- Keeping Commitments;
- Clarifying the Expectations;
- Showing Personal Integrity;
- Apologizing Sincerely When You Make a Withdrawal.

Finally, the author suggested that the differences between people's perspectives would give us an opportunities to build a deep relationship. “Every P problem is a PC opportunity.” Thus we should always appreciate our differences.

(b) Chapter 6 Habit 4: Think Win/Win – Principles of Interpersonal Leadership.

This chapter deals with people's different mindsets under different environment:

- Win/Loss;
- Loss/Win;

- Lose/Lose,
- Win,
- and Win/Win (or No Deal).

The first three mindsets mainly deal with competitive environments, with limited resources and opposite goals. The author, however, stressed that maintaining a competitive mindset would narrow our perspective and cost people's trust towards us, which consequently hurt our relationship with others. Moreover, people with competitive mentality would treat others with authoritarian approach, focusing on the power and position rather than the principle.

Habit 4 is a belief that the Third Alternative exists, taking us out of the dichotomous mentality of Win vs Loss. Win/Win is a cooperative mentality. It comes from “our character, then moves towards our relationship, out of which flow agreements.. It is nurtured in an environment where structures and systems are based on Win/Win. And it involves process, which encourage Win/Win.” Win/Win provides a direction of interpersonal relationship (interpersonal leadership).

We can work on building a Win/Win mindset using our character of integrity, maturity in combination with an abundance mentality. We should maintain high level of trusts among people. Then we can work together with people to form a partnership agreements. Besides this, the author suggested that we also need to design better reward systems. Such system designs should reflect the values and principles in our mission statement and should be aligned with our personal goals. Finally, we need to adopt various principled negotiation strategies in the process. This includes

- understanding the other's perspective,
- identifying key interests,
- seeking for mutually beneficial solutions
- and inventing new options.

The process of obtaining Win/Win requires not only skills but also our characters and the level of accumulated trusts during our past interactions with people. That is why it is essential to start with our own personal development and earning trusts with people. Note that the process of obtaining Win/Win would also help us accumulate trusts and improve our relationship with others. “The end and the means are the same”.

Note that Win/Loss and its competitive mindset are also critical for sports, games, society and economy. It is through competitions that limited resources are distributed. Competitions and its associated Win/Loss push the new development in personal, social and economical status. The important point in this chapter is to understand which mindset to apply at which situation. When both parties have interests to collaborate and to reach agreement, it is when Win/Win mentality start to shine. On the other hand, it is always up to us to decide if we want to participate in competition. No Deal is also an option when there is no viable Win/Win solution between two parties.

- (c) Chapter 7 Habit 5: Seek First to Understand, Then to Be Understood – Principles of Empathic Communication.

This chapter addresses an important topic in relationship management, i.e. communications. In specific, it presents a powerful principle: “Seek first to understand, then to be understood.” Before we rush in to provide our own diagnose, we need to obtain data from others. Empathic listening is a critical communication skill in interdependent relationship management.

“Seek first to understand” is a critical paradigm shift. Most people listen with intent to reply. But we should really listen with intent to understand. If you fail to understand others, you fail to earn their trusts, thus fail to influence them. It is hard to diagnose before prescribe, since understanding others first opens ourselves to be vulnerable to others’ paradigms first. It thus requires strong instinct security and integrity in one’s character to implement. Being influenceable is the key to influencing others. It can greatly increase the level of trusts in relationship.

In this chapter, we discussed the four levels of listenings:

- ignoring;
- pretending;
- selective listening;
- empathic listening.

Here we see that only empathic listening would give us accurate data about the other people, thus allows us to understand them. Through empathic listening, we understand others’ perspectives, which is the first step towards a Win/Win solution.

We should reserve our judgement to others before we understand them. Also we should avoid autobiographical responses first, such as evaluate; probe; advise; interpret. This is not about us. In empathic listening, we rephrase the content and reflect the feeling. This is not only a communication skill but should also come from our own desire to understand, and our own character strength as well as the accumulated trusts (the Emotional Bank Account) we obtained from other people.

Finally, we need to be understood. To be understood is also important in Habit 5. It requires us to improve our communication skills, to present our idea clearly, empathically, logically and to express it with courage. In this chapter, the author presents the sequence “ethos, pathos, logos”, i.e.

- our character and the trusts we inspire (ethos);
- our empathic feelings (pathos);
- the logics of our presentation (logos).

In the context of deep understanding other’s paradigms and concerns, we can significantly improve the credibility of our ideas.

Empathic Listening is within our Circle of Influence. It is our choice to put aside our autobiography and to seek to understand first before we present our own idea. As proactive people, we will create opportunities. Empathic Listening requires patience and respects.

(d) Chapter 8 Habit 6: Synergize – Principles of Creative Cooperation.

This chapter discuss what miracle would happen if you mastered the principle-centered leadership and is able to implement Habit 1-5 to your own personal life and your relationships. “The highest form of synergy focus the four unique human endowments (self-awareness, imagination, conscience, independent will), the motives of Win/Win, and the skills of empathic communications on the toughest challenges we face in life.” In summary, this chapter depicts the ideal destination of relationship management, i.e. reaching synergy within the group. It is the result of both Private Victory and Public Victory.

Synergy means that the whole is greater than the sum of individual. Synergy in communications will let you open your minds to new opportunities and inspire creativities.

Synergy does not come naturally in human interactions. It is result of high level of trusts and high cooperations. Human interactions

- begins with defensiveness, an indicator of low trust and Win/Loss mentality,
- to respectful communications, a mature, polite interactions but not empathically,
- to synergistic communications, a level of high trust, high cooperation, high creativity.

Valuing the differences is the essence of synergy – the mental, the emotional, the psychological difference between people. It requires us to master Habit 5, to understand first. We need to recognize our own perceptual limitations and appreciate resources available through rich interactions.

4. Part 4: Renewal. This part deals with the continual balanced development of ourselves and our relationship in an ever-changing interdependent environment. The author in this part inspired the readers to view themselves in the middle of process. The renewal process is an upward spiral that involves learning, commitment and doing. All habits (1-6), principles and skills we have learned so far need to be maintained and practiced regularly and consistently. The ultimate goal of renewal is to always prepare ourselves in upcoming challenges in life.

(a) Chapter 9 Habit 7: Sharpen the Saw – Principles of Balanced Self-Renewal

There are two keywords in the principle: balanced and self-renewal. On the self-renewal part, the author introduced four dimensions of renewal:

- Physical Dimension: our body, food, exercise, rest;
- Spiritual Dimension: our principles, our values, our personal missions, and our commitments;
- Mental Dimension: our knowledge, our educations, skills in learning, reading, writing, planning etc;
- Emotional/Social Dimension: our relationship, synergy, empathic communications, our intrinsic security.

Note that all four dimensions of self-renewal requires us to be proactive since they are all Quadrant II matters. In fact, the renewal process, as the Habit 7 suggests, is Quadrant II activity – Shapen the saws is not urgent but important. Use our Habit

1 and Habit 3 to help in the planning and executing Habit 7.

Finally, the author suggests us to “*show diligence in the process of renewal by educating and obeying our conscience”. “Conscience is the endowment that senses our congruence or disparity with correct principles and lifts us towards them.” As we renew on all four dimensions in a balanced way, we will reinforce all our Habits learned by far.

- Physical dimension renewal reinforces our personal vision (Habit 1) with proactivity
- Spiritual dimension renewal reinforces our personal leadership (Habit 2) with improved imagination, conscience to deeply understand our principles and values.
- Mental dimension renewal reinforces our personal management (Habit 3) via Quadrant II focus and prioritization.
- Emotional/Social dimension renewal reinforces our interpersonal leadership (Habit 4) and empathic communications (Habit 5) and then, based on the foundation of Habit 1-3 on Private Victory, it provides the source of intrinsic security that we need to Shapen the Saw (Habit 7).

In the process of balanced renewal, we would reach to Synergy (Habit 6).

In this final principle, the Principle of Balanced Self-renewal, we revisit all the Habits and Principles we have learned so far and we realized that they are interconnected and are reinforcing each other. The Synergy of Seven Habits is also the ultimate ideal destination for the readers after finishing reading the book. The process of balanced renewal is thus critical for reader to master all seven principles and seven habits together.

At the end, it is critical to realize that effectiveness is not efficiency. The latter is about how we handle our work, but the former is about how we lead our life. Effectiveness is a higher level of efficiency since it is beyond one single thing but an entire process. Effectiveness is not about one single objectives. It is about reaching the balance of multiple objectives in our life.

(b) Chapter 10 Inside-Out Again

“Becoming a Transition Person” is the last message of this book. It is an inspiring message from author to break the scripts from past generations to the future. Rescripting yourself and scripting the others.

Side Note: It is called Seven Habits, but it is actually Five Habits (1-5) + a Looping Mechanism (Habit 7) + an Ideal Outcome (Habit 6).

1.4 Comparison with Other Books

Getting Things Done: The Art of Stress-Free Productivity by David Allen v.s. The 7 Habits of Highly Effective People by Stephen R. Covey

- Both books are influential in the self-help and productivity genres. Here's a comparison of their main points:

– Approach to Productivity:

- * David Allen's Getting Things Done (GTD): GTD is bottom-up approach. Allen focuses on practical strategies for organizing tasks and managing work-flow. The GTD system involves capturing, clarifying, organizing, reflecting, and engaging with tasks.
- * Stephen R. Covey's The 7 Habits: The 7 Habits is top-down approach. Covey provides a holistic approach to productivity by emphasizing character development and habit formation. The seven habits cover a range of personal and professional effectiveness principles.

– Task Management:

- * GTD: Allen introduces a systematic approach to managing tasks, including the use of lists, projects, and next actions. The emphasis is on clearing mental clutter and organizing tasks effectively.
- * The 7 Habits: Covey's habits also address task management, particularly in Habit 3, which is about prioritizing and executing tasks based on importance.

– Time Management:

- * GTD: Allen's system indirectly addresses time management by providing a structure for organizing tasks and priorities.
- * The 7 Habits: Covey's approach includes time management principles, particularly in Habit 3 (Put First Things First), which focuses on time management and prioritization.

– Proactivity and Responsiveness:

- * GTD: Allen's approach is practical and emphasizes being responsive to tasks as they arise, but it also involves proactive planning and organization.
- * The 7 Habits: Covey's habit of being proactive encourages individuals to take initiative and be responsible for their choices.

– Holistic vs. Task-Specific:

- * GTD: Allen's focus is primarily on the practical aspects of task and project management, aiming to reduce stress and increase productivity.
- * The 7 Habits: Covey's book takes a more holistic approach, addressing character development, interpersonal relationships, and personal mission statements alongside productivity.

– Mindset and Paradigms:

- * GTD: Allen's book is more about changing the way individuals manage tasks and projects, addressing the mindset and habits associated with productivity.
- * The 7 Habits: Covey's book emphasizes paradigm shifts, encouraging readers to change their perspectives on life and work to achieve lasting effectiveness.
- In summary, while both books offer valuable insights into productivity, Allen's Getting Things Done is more task-specific, providing a detailed system for managing workflow, while Covey's The 7 Habits takes a holistic approach, incorporating principles for personal development and effectiveness.

How to Win Friends and Influence People* by Dale Carnegie v.s. The 7 habits of highly effective people by Stephen R. Covey

- Both are influential self-help books, they approach personal and professional development from different perspectives. Here's a brief comparison of their main points:
 - Focus on Relationships:
 - * Carnegie's book emphasizes building positive relationships through effective communication, active listening, and making others feel valued.
 - * Covey's book also values relationships but places a broader focus on developing interdependent relationships by fostering trust and collaboration.
 - Communication Styles:
 - * Carnegie's book provides practical tips on communication, including the importance of being genuinely interested in others, avoiding criticism, and making people feel important.
 - * Covey's book delves into effective communication as one of the seven habits, emphasizing the importance of understanding before seeking to be understood.
 - Principles vs. Habits:
 - * Carnegie's book revolves around principles of human interaction and behavior, offering practical guidelines for applying these principles in various situations.
 - * Covey's book outlines seven habits that, when cultivated, lead to personal and professional effectiveness. These habits are presented as a holistic approach to living a successful and fulfilling life.
 - Proactive vs. Reactive Approach:
 - * Covey's book introduces the concept of being proactive, taking responsibility for one's actions, and focusing on what can be controlled.
 - * Carnegie's book encourages a positive and proactive approach to building relationships but doesn't explicitly use the term "proactive."
 - Time Management:
 - * Covey's book includes a strong emphasis on time management within the framework of his seven habits.

- * Carnegie's book touches on time management indirectly through effective communication and building positive relationships.

– Personal Development: Both books promote personal development, but

- * Carnegie's book focuses more on social skills and interpersonal relationships.

- * Covey's book takes a broader approach, covering personal and professional development, including character-building and aligning actions with core values.

- In summary, while both books share the goal of personal and professional growth, Carnegie's work is more focused on interpersonal skills and communication, while Covey's book provides a holistic framework for effective living through habits and principles.

2 Paradigms and Principles

2.1 Inside-Out

If we wanted to change the situation, we first had to change ourselves. And to change ourselves effectively, we first had to change our perceptions.

2.1.1 Peronality and Character Ethics

- In stark contrast, almost all the literature in the first 150 years or so focused on what could be called the character ethic as the foundation of success – things like integrity, humility, fidelity, temperance, courage, justice, patience, industry, simplicity, modesty, and the Golden Rule. Benjamin Franklin’s autobiography is representative of that literature. It is, basically, the story of one man’s effort to integrate certain principles and habits deep within his nature.
- The character ethic taught that there are basic principles of effective living, and that people can only experience true success and enduring happiness as they learn and integrate these principles into their basic character.
- The elements of Personality Ethic are sometimes essential for success.
 - personality growth
 - communication skills
 - education in the field of influence strategies
 - positive thinking

2.1.2 Primary and Secondary Greatness

- The elements of Personality Ethic are secondary, not primary traits. If my character is fundamentally flawed, marked by duplicity and insincerity, then, in the long run, I cannot be successful – My duplicity will breed distrust, and everything i do – even using so-called good human relations techniques – will be preceived as manipulative.
- In one-shot or short-term human interactions, you can use Personality Ethics to win over good impressions through charm and skill.
- If there is little or no trust, there is no foundation for permanent success. Only basic goodness gives life to techinque.
- You always reap what you sow; there is no shortcut.
- If there isn’t deep integrity and fundamental character strength, the challenges of life will cause true motives to surface and human relationship failure will replace short-term success.
- Many people with secondary greatness – that is, social recognition for their talents – lack primary greatness or goodness in their character.

2.1.3 The Power of A Paradigm

- The Seven Habits of Highly Effective People embody many of the fundamental principles of human effectiveness. These habits are basic; they are primary. They represent the internal- ization of correct principles upon which enduring happiness and success are based.

- The word paradigm is more commonly used today to mean a model, theory, perception, assumption, or frame of reference. In a more general sense, it means the way we see the world in terms of preceiving, understanding, interpreting.
- A simple way to understand paradigms is to see them as maps. Maps is not the territory. A map is simply an explanation of certain aspects of the territory. It is a theory, an explanation, or model of something else.
- Each of us has many, many maps in our head, which can be divided into two main categories:
 - maps of the way things are, or realities,
 - and maps of the way things should be, or values.
- We seldom question their accuracy; we're usually even unaware that we have them. We simply assume that the way we see things is the way they really are or the way they should be.
- And our attitudes and behaviors grow out of those assumptions. The way we see things is the source of the way we think and the way we act.
- The fundamental problem has nothing to do with your behavior or your attitude. It has everything to do with having a wrong map.
- The paradigms are the source of our attitudes and behaviors. And conditioning effects impact our perceptions and paradigms.
- The basic flaws of the personality ethic is oo try to change outward attitudes and behaviors does very little good in the long run if we fail to examine the basic paradigms from which those attitudes and behaviors flow.

2.1.4 The Power of A Paradigm Shift

- Paradigm Shift: almost every significant breakthrough in the field of scientific endeavor is first a break with tradition, with old ways of thinking, with old paradigms.
- Not all Paradigm Shifts are in positive directions. As we have observed, the shift from the character ethic to the personality ethic has drawn us away from the very roots that nourish true success and happiness.
- But whether they shift us in positive or negative directions, paradigm shift create powerful change. Our paradigms, correct or incorrect, are the sources of our attitudes and behaviors, and ultimately our relationships with others.
- Many people experience a similar fundamental shift in thinking when they face a life-threatening crisis and suddenly see their priorities in a different light, or when they suddenly step into a new role, such as that of husband or wife, parent or grandparent, manager or leader.

2.1.5 Seeing and Being

- Not all Paradigm Shifts are instantaneous. The power of a Paradigm Shift is the essential power of quantum change, whether that shift is an instantaneous or a slow and deliberate process

- Our Paradigms are the way we “see” the world or circumstances – not in terms of our visual sense of sight, but in terms of perceiving, understanding, and interpreting.
- Paradigms are inseparable from character. Being is seeing in the human dimension.

2.1.6 The Principle-Centered Paradigm

- The Character Ethic is based on the fundamental idea that there are principles that govern human effectiveness – natural laws in the human dimension that are just as real, just as unchanging and unarguably “there” as laws such as gravity are in the physical dimension.
- Principles are like lighthouses. They are natural laws that cannot be broken.
- Principles are not values. Principles are the territory. Values are maps. When we value correct principles, we have truth – a knowledge of things as they are.
- Principles are guidelines for human conduct that are proven to have enduring, permanent value. They’re fundamental. They’re essentially unarguable because they are self-evident.
- The more closely our maps or paradigms are aligned with these principles or natural laws, the more accurate and functional they will be. Correct maps will infinitely impact our personal and interpersonal effectiveness far more than any amount of effort expended on changing our attitudes and behaviors

2.1.7 Principles of Growth and Change

- In all of life, there are sequential stages of growth and development. Each step is important and each one takes time. No step can be skipped.
- This is true in all phases of life, in all areas of development.

2.1.8 The Way we See the Problem Is the Problem

- The way we see the problem is the problem.
- Can you see how fundamentally the paradigms of the personality ethic affect the very way we see our problems as well as the way we attempt to solve them?

2.1.9 A New Level of Thinking

- This new level of thinking is what Seven Habits of Highly Effective People is about.
- It’s a principle-centered, character-based, “Inside-Out” approach to personal and interpersonal effectiveness.
- “Inside-Out” means to start first with self; even more fundamentally, to start with the most inside part of self – with your paradigms, your character, and your motives.
- The Inside-Out approach says that Private Victories precede Public Victories, that making and keeping promises to ourselves precedes making and keeping promises to others.
- Inside-Out is a process – a continuing process of renewal based on the natural laws that govern human growth and progress. It’s an upward spiral of growth that leads to progressively higher forms of responsible independence and effective interdependence.

2.2 The Seven Habits – An Overview

2.2.1 “Habits” Defined

- For our purposes, we will define a habit as the intersection of knowledge, skill, and desire.
 - Knowledge is the theoretical paradigm, the what to do and the why.
 - Skill is the how to do.
 - And desire is the motivation, the want to do.

In order to make something a habit in our lives, we have to have all three.

2.2.2 The Maturity Continuum

- Our growth from infancy to adulthood is in accordance with natural law. And there are many dimensions to growth. Reaching our full physical maturity, for example, does not necessarily assure us of simultaneous emotional or mental maturity. On the other hand, a person’s physical dependence does not mean that he or she is mentally or emotionally immature.
- On the maturity continuum,
 - dependence is the paradigm of you – you take care of me; you come through for me; you didn’t come through; I blame you for the results.
 - Independence is the paradigm of I – I can do it; I am responsible; I am self-reliant; I can choose.
 - Interdependence is the paradigm of we – we can do it: we can cooperate; we can combine our talents and abilities and create something greater together.
- Dependent people need others to get what they want. Independent people can get what they want through their own effort. Interdependent people combine their own efforts with the efforts of others to achieve their greatest success.
- If I were independent, physically, I could pretty well make it on my own.

Mentally, I could think my own thoughts, I could move from one level of abstraction to another. I could think creatively and analytically and organize and express my thoughts in understandable ways.

Emotionally, I would be validated from within. I would be inner directed. My sense of worth would not be a function of being liked or treated well.

- True independence of character empowers us to act rather than be acted upon.
- Independence is a major achievement in and of itself. But independence is not supreme.
- Independent thinking alone is not suited to interdependent reality. Independent people who do not have the maturity to think and act interdependently may be good individual producers, but they won’t be good leaders or team players. They’re not coming from the paradigm of interdependence necessary to succeed in marriage, family, or organizational reality.

- Life is, by nature, highly interdependent.

- Interdependence is a far more mature, more advanced concept.

If I am physically interdependent, I am self-reliant and capable, but I also realize that you and I working together can accomplish far more than, even at my best, I could accomplish alone.

If I am emotionally interdependent, I derive a great sense of worth within myself, but I also recognize the need for love, for giving, and for receiving love from others.

If I am intellectually interdependent, I realize that I need the best thinking of other people to join with my own.

- Interdependence is a choice only independent people can make. Dependent people cannot choose to become interdependent. They don't have the character to do it; they don't own enough of themselves.

2.2.3 Effectiveness Defined

- A paradigm of effectiveness that is in harmony with a natural law, a principle I call the "P/PC Balance."
 - P stands for Production,
 - and PC stands for Production Capacity.
- True effectiveness is a function of two things:
 - what is produced (the production)
 - and the producing asset or capacity to produce (the production capacity)
- Effectiveness lies in the balance. Focusing only on production will leave no assets to produce; focusing only on production capacity will fail to produce enough to maintain yourself or the capacity.

2.2.4 Three Kinds of Assets

- Basically, there are three kinds of assets: physical, financial, and human.
 - physical assets: house, car, personal belongings, our body or our environment.
 - financial assets: income, job, experience, skills, education, our capacity to earn,
 - human assets: trust, responsibility, marriage, child-parent, other human relationships,
- In the human area, the P/PC Balance is equally fundamental, but even more important, because people control physical and financial assets.
- Examples in marriage, in child education.

2.2.5 Organizational PC

- One of the immensely valuable aspects of any correct principle is that it is valid and applicable in a wide variety of circumstances.

- When people fail to respect the P/PC Balance in their use of physical assets in organizations, they decrease organizational effectiveness and often leave others with dying geese.
- The P/PC Balance is particularly important as it applies to the human assets of an organization – the customers and the employees.
- There are organizations that talk a lot about the customer and then completely neglect the people that deal with the customer – the employees. The PC principle is to always treat your employees exactly as you want them to treat your best customers.
- Effectiveness lies in the balance.

Excessive focus on P results in ruined health, worn-out machines, depleted bank accounts, and broken relationships.

Too much focus on PC is like a person who runs for three or four hours a day, bragging about the extra 10 years of life it creates, unaware he's spending them running. Or a person endlessly going to school, never producing, living on other people's golden eggs – the eternal student syndrome.

- To maintain the P/PC Balance is often a difficult judgment call. But I suggest it is the very essence of effectiveness. It balances short term with long term.
- The P/PC Balance is the very essence of effectiveness. It's validated in every arena of life.

2.2.6 How to Use This Book and What You Can Expect

- Before we begin work on the Seven Habits of Highly Effective People, I would like to suggest two Paradigm Shifts that will greatly increase the value you will receive from this material:
 - First, I would recommend that you not “see” this material as a book. You may choose to read it completely through once for a sense of the whole. But the material is designed to be a companion in the continual process of change and growth. It is organized incrementally and with suggestions for application at the end of each habit so that you can study and focus on any particular habit as you are ready.

As you progress to deeper levels of understanding and implementation, you can go back time and again to the principles contained in each habit and work to expand your knowledge, skill, and desire.

 - Second, I would suggest that you shift your paradigm of your own involvement in this material from the role of learner to that of teacher. Take an Inside-Out approach, and read with the purpose in mind of sharing or discussing what you learn with someone else within 48 hours after you learn it.
- If you decide to open your “gate of change” to really understand and live the principles embodied in the Seven Habits, I feel comfortable in assuring you several positive things will happen.
 - First, your growth will be evolutionary, but the net effect will be revolutionary.

The net effect of opening the “gate of change” to the first three habits – the habits of Private Victory – will be significantly increased self-confidence.

As you live your values, your sense of identity, integrity, control, and inner-directedness will infuse you with both exhilaration and peace. You will define yourself from within, rather than by people's opinions or by comparisons to others. “Wrong” and “right” will have little to do with being found out.

Ironically, you'll find that as you care less about what others think of you; you will care more about what others think of themselves and their worlds, including their relationship with you. You'll no longer build your emotional life on other people's weaknesses. In addition, you'll find it easier and more desirable to change because there is something – some core deep within – that is essentially changeless.

- As you open yourself to the next three habits – the habits of Public Victory – you will discover and unleash both the desire and the resources to heal and rebuild important relationships that have deteriorated, or even broken. Good relationships will improve – become deeper, more solid, more creative, and more adventuresome.
- The seventh habit, if deeply internalized, will renew the first six and will make you truly independent and capable of effective interdependence. Through it, you can charge your own batteries.

3 Private Victory

3.1 Habit 1: Be Proactive – Principles of Personal Vision

Self-awareness enables us to stand apart and examine even the way we “see” ourselves – our paradigm, the most fundamental paradigm of effectiveness. It affects not only our attitudes and behaviors, but also how we see other people. It becomes our map of the basic nature of mankind.

3.1.1 The Social Mirror

- If the only vision we have of ourselves comes from the social mirror – from the current social paradigm and from the opinions, perceptions, and paradigms of the people around us – our view of ourselves is like the reflection in the crazy mirror room at the carnival.
- These visions are disjointed and out of proportion. They are often more projections than reflections, projecting the concerns and character weaknesses of people giving the input rather than accurately reflecting what we are.
- While we have acknowledged the tremendous power of conditioning in our lives, to say that we are determined by it, that we have no control over that influence, creates quite a different map.

3.1.2 Between Stimulus and Response

- The deterministic paradigm comes primarily from the study of animals. Our unique human endowments lift us above the animal world. The extent to which we exercise and develop these endowments empowers us to fulfill our uniquely human potential. Between stimulus and response is our greatest power – the freedom to choose.
- Within the freedom to choose are those endowments that make us uniquely human.
 - In addition to self-awareness,

- we have imagination – the ability to create in our minds beyond our present reality.
- We have conscience – a deep inner awareness of right and wrong, of the principles that govern our behavior, and a sense of the degree to which our thoughts and actions are in harmony with them.
- And we have independent will – *the ability to act based on our self-awareness, free of all other influences.

3.1.3 “Proactivity” Defined

- In discovering the basic principle of the nature of man, Frankl described an accurate self-map from which he began to develop the first and most basic habit of a highly effective person in any environment, the habit of Proactivity.
- Proactivity means more than merely taking initiative. It means that as human beings, we are responsible for our own lives. Our behavior is a function of our decisions, not our conditions. We can subordinate feelings to values. We have the initiative and the responsibility to make things happen.
- Highly proactive people recognize that responsibility. They do not blame circumstances, conditions, or conditioning for their behavior. Their behavior is a product of their own conscious choice, based on values, rather than a product of their conditions, based on feeling.
- Because we are, by nature, proactive, if our lives are a function of conditioning and conditions, it is because we have, by conscious decision or by default, chosen to empower those things to control us.
- In making such a choice, we become reactive.

Reactive people are often affected by their physical environment.

Reactive people are also affected by their social environment, by the “social weather.” Reactive people build their emotional lives around the behavior of others, empowering the weaknesses of other people to control them.

- The ability to subordinate an impulse to a value is the essence of the proactive person. Reactive people are driven by feelings, by circumstances, by conditions, by their environment. Proactive people are driven by values – carefully thought about, selected and internalized values.

I admit this is very hard to accept emotionally, especially if we have had years and years of explaining our misery in the name of circumstance or someone else’s behavior. But until a person can say deeply and honestly, “I am what I am today because of the choices I made yesterday,” that person cannot say, “I choose otherwise.”

- Our character, our basic identity, does not have to be hurt at all. In fact, our most difficult experiences become the crucibles that forge our character and develop the internal powers, the freedom to handle difficult circumstances in the future and to inspire others to do so as well.
- Viktor Frankl suggests that there are three central values in life –
 - the experiential, or that which happens to us;

- the creative, or that which we bring into existence;
- and the attitudinal, or our response in difficult circumstances such as terminal illness

What matters most is how we respond to what we experience in life.

- Difficult circumstances often create Paradigm Shifts, whole new frames of reference by which people see the world and themselves and others in it, and what life is asking of them. Their larger perspective reflects the attitudinal values that lift and inspire us all.

3.1.4 Taking the Initiative

- Our basic nature is to act, and not be acted upon. As well as enabling us to choose our response to particular circumstances, this empowers us to create circumstances.
- Taking initiative does not mean being pushy, obnoxious, or aggressive. It does mean recognizing our responsibility to make things happen.
- Many people wait for something to happen or someone to take care of them. But people who end up with the good jobs are the proactive ones who are solutions to problems, not problems themselves, who seize the initiative to do whatever is necessary, consistent with correct principles, to get the job done.
- Holding people to the responsible course is not demeaning; it is affirming. By respecting the proactive nature of other people, we provide them with at least one clear, undistorted reflection from the social mirror.

3.1.5 Act or Be Acted Upon

- It takes initiative to create the P/PC Balance of effectiveness in your life. It takes initiative to develop the Seven Habits. As you study the other six habits, you will see that each depends on the development of your proactive muscles. Each puts the responsibility on you to act.

If you wait to be acted upon, you will be acted upon. And growth and opportunity consequences attend either road.

- “What is our response? What are we going to do? How can we exercise initiative in this situation?”
- The difference between positive thinking and proactivity: Proactivity did face reality. We faced the reality of the current circumstance and of future projections. But we also faced the reality that we had the power to choose a positive response to those circumstances and projections. Not facing reality would have been to accept the idea that what’s happening in our environment had to determine us.

3.1.6 Listening to Our Language

- Because our attitudes and behaviors flow out of our paradigms, if we use our self-awareness to examine them, we can often see in them the nature of our underlying maps. Our language, for example, is a very real indicator of the degree to which we see ourselves as proactive people.
- The language of reactive people absolves them of responsibility. That language comes from a basic paradigm of determinism. And the whole spirit of it is the transfer of responsibility.

- A serious problem with reactive language is that it becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy. People become reinforced in the paradigm that they are determined, and they produce evidence to support the belief. They feel increasingly victimized and out of control, not in charge of their life or their destiny. They blame outside forces – other people, circumstances, even the stars – for their own situation.
- Proactive people subordinate feelings to values. Love, the feeling, can be recaptured.

3.1.7 Circle of Concern or Circle of Influence

- Another excellent way to become more self-aware regarding our own degree of proactivity is to look at where we focus our time and energy.
 - Circle of Concern: a wide range of concerns; separate from things in which we have no particular mental or emotional involvement.
 - Circle of Influence: within the Circle of Concerns, there are things that we have real control.

Within the Circle of Concerns but outside Circle of Influence, there are some things over which we have no real control and others that we can do something about.

- By determining which of these two circles is the focus of most of our time and energy, we can discover much about the degree of our proactivity.
 - Proactive people focus their efforts in the Circle of Influence.
 - Reactive people, on the other hand, focus their efforts in the Circle of Concern. They focus on the weakness of other people, the problems in the environment, and circumstances over which they have no control.

The negative energy generated by that focus, combined with neglect in areas they could do something about, causes their Circle of Influence to shrink.

- As long as we are working in our Circle of Concern, we empower the things within it to control us. We aren't taking the proactive initiative necessary to effect positive change.
- It was only when we went to work in our Circle of Influence, when we focused on our own paradigms, that we began to create a positive energy that changed ourselves and eventually influenced our son as well. By working on ourselves instead of worrying about conditions, we were able to influence the conditions.
- Because of position, wealth, role, or relationships, there are some circumstances in which a person's Circle of Influence is larger than his or her Circle of Concern. This situation reflects on a self-inflicted emotional myopia – another reactive selfish life-style focused in the Circle of Concern.

3.1.8 Direct, Indirect, and No Control

- The problems we face fall in one of three areas:
 - direct control (problems involving our own behavior);
 - indirect control (problems involving other people's behavior);

- or no control (problems we can do nothing about, such as our past or situational realities).
- – Direct control problems are solved by working on our habits since they are within our Circle of Influence. See “Private Victories”.
- Indirect control problems are solved by changing our methods of influence. These are the “Public Victories”
- No control problems involve taking the responsibility to smile, to genuinely and peacefully accept these problems and learn to live with them, even though we don’t like them.
- Changing our habits, changing our methods of influence and changing the way we see our no control problems are all within our Circle of Influence.

3.1.9 Expanding Circle of Influence

- It is inspiring to realize that in choosing our response to circumstance, we powerfully affect our circumstance.
- This man focused on his Circle of Influence. He was treated like a gofer, also. But he would do more than what was expected. He anticipated the president’s need. He read with empathy the president’s underlying concern, so when he presented information, he also gave his analysis and his recommendations based on that analysis.
- There are some people who interpret “proactive” to mean pushy, aggressive, or insensitive; but that isn’t the case at all. Proactive people aren’t pushy. They’re smart, they’re value driven, they read reality, and they know what’s needed.

3.1.10 The “Have’s” and the “Be’s”

- One way to determine which circle our concern is in is to distinguish between the have’s and the be’s.
 - The Circle of Concern is filled with the have’s.
 - The Circle of Influence is filled with the be’s.
- Anytime we think the problem is “out there,” that thought is the problem. We empower what’s out there to control us. The change paradigm is “outside-in” – what’s out there has to change before we can change.
- The proactive approach is to change from the Inside-Out: to be different, and by being different, to effect positive change in what’s out there – I can be more resourceful, I can be more diligent, I can be more creative, I can be more cooperative.
- It is so much easier to blame other people, conditioning, or conditions for our own stagnant situation. But we are responsible – “response-able” – to control our lives and to powerfully influence our circumstances by working on be, on what we are.
- If I really want to improve my situation, I can work on the one thing over which I have control – myself.

- As proactive people, we can carry our own physical or social weather with us. We can be happy and accept those things that at present we can't control, while we focus our efforts on the things that we can.

3.1.11 The Other End of the Stick

- Before we totally shift our life focus to our Circle of Influence, we need to consider two things in our Circle of Concern that merit deeper thought – consequences and mistakes.
- While we are free to choose our actions, we are not free to choose the consequences of those actions. Consequences are governed by natural law.
- Our behavior is governed by principles. Living in harmony with them brings positive consequences; violating them brings negative consequences. We are free to choose our response in any situation, but in doing so, we choose the attendant consequence. “When we pick up one end of the stick, we pick up the other.”
- Sometimes our choices have brought consequences we would rather have lived without. If we had the choice to make over again, we would make it differently. We call these choices mistakes, and they are the second thing that merits our deeper thought.
- For those filled with regret, perhaps the most needful exercise of proactivity is to realize that past mistakes are also out there in the Circle of Concern. We can't recall them, we can't undo them, we can't control the consequences that came as a result.
- The proactive approach to a mistake is to acknowledge it instantly, correct it, and learn from it.
- But not to acknowledge a mistake, not to correct it and learn from it, is a mistake of a different order. It usually puts a person on a self-deceiving, self-justifying path, often involving rationalization (rational lies) to self and to others. This second mistake, this cover-up, empowers the first, giving it disproportionate importance, and causes far deeper injury to self.

3.1.12 Making and Keeping Commitments

- At the very heart of our Circle of Influence is our ability to make and keep commitments and promises. The commitments we make to ourselves and to others, and our integrity to those commitments, is the essence and clearest manifestation of our proactivity.
- It is also the essence of our growth. Through our human endowments of self-awareness and conscience, we become conscious of areas of weakness, areas for improvement, areas of talent that could be developed, areas that need to be changed or eliminated from our lives.
- Then, as we recognize and use our imagination and independent will to act on that awareness – making promises, setting goals, and being true to them – we build the strength of character, the being, that makes possible every other positive thing in our lives.
- It is here that we find two ways to put ourselves in control of our lives immediately.
 - We can make a promise – and keep it.
 - Or we can set a goal – and work to achieve it.

- As we make and keep commitments, even small commitments, we begin to establish an inner integrity that gives us the awareness of self-control and the courage and strength to accept more of the responsibility for our own lives. By making and keeping promises to ourselves and others, little by little, our honor becomes greater than our moods.
- The power to make and keep commitments to ourselves is the essence of developing the basic habits of effectiveness.

3.1.13 Proactivity: the Thirty-Day Test

- I would challenge you to test the principle of proactivity for 30 days. Simply try it and see what happens.
- For 30 days work only in your Circle of Influence.
 - Make small commitments and keep them.
 - Be a light, not a judge. Be a model, not a critic. Look at the weaknesses of others with compassion, not accusation. The issue is your own chosen response to the situation and what you should be doing.
 - Be part of the solution, not part of the problem.
- We are responsible for our own effectiveness, for our own happiness, and ultimately, I would say, for most of our circumstances.
- Knowing that we are responsible – “response-able” – is fundamental to effectiveness and to every other habit of effectiveness we will discuss.

3.2 Habit 2: Begin with the End in Mind – Principles of Personal Leadership

3.2.1 What It Means

- To Begin with the End in Mind means to start with a clear understanding of your destination. It means to know where you’re going so that you better understand where you are now and so that the steps you take are always in the right direction.
- How different our lives are when we really know what is deeply important to us, and, keeping that picture in mind, we manage ourselves each day to be and to do what really matters most.
- We may be very busy, we may be very efficient, but we will also be truly effective only when we Begin with the End in Mind.

3.2.2 All Things are Created Twice

- “Begin with the End in Mind” is based on the principle that all things are created twice.
 - There’s a mental or first creation,
 - and a physical or second creation to all things.
- The carpenter’s rule is “measure twice, cut once.” You have to make sure that the blueprint, the first creation, is really what you want, that you’ve thought everything through. Then you put it into bricks and mortar. Each day you go to the construction shed and pull out the blueprint to get marching orders for the day. You Begin with the End in Mind.

- The same is true with parenting.
- To the extent to which we understand the principle of two creations and accept the responsibility for both, we act within and enlarge the borders of our Circle of Influence.

To the extent to which we do not operate in harmony with this principle and take charge of the first creation, we diminish it.

3.2.3 By Design Or Default

- Not all first creations are by conscious design.
- In our personal lives, if we do not develop our own self-awareness and become responsible for first creations, we empower other people and circumstances outside our Circle of Influence to shape much of our lives by default.
- Whether we are aware of it or not, whether we are in control of it or not, there is a first creation to every part of our lives.

We are either the second creation of our own proactive design, or we are the second creation of other people's agendas, of circumstances, or of past habits.

- Habit 1 says, “You are the creator.” Habit 2 is the first creation.

3.2.4 Leadership And Management – the Two Creations

- Habit 2 is based on principles of personal leadership.
 - Leadership is the first creation.
 - Management is the second creation, which we'll discuss in the chapter on Habit 3. But leadership has to come first.
- “Management is doing things right; leadership is doing the right things.”
 - Management is a bottom-line focus.
 - Leadership deals with the top line.

Management is efficiency in climbing the ladder of success; leadership determines whether the ladder is leaning against the right wall.

- We are more in need of a vision or designation and a compass (a set of principles or directions) and less in need of a road map.
- Effectiveness – often even survival – does not depend solely on how much effort we expend, but on whether or not the effort we expend is in the right jungle. And the metamorphosis taking place in most every industry and profession demands leadership first and management second.
- Efficient management without effective leadership is, as one individual phrased it, “like straightening deck chairs on the Titanic.” No management success can compensate for failure in leadership. But leadership is hard because we're often caught in a man- agement paradigm.

In management paradigm, one often thinks of control, efficiency, and rules instead of direction, purpose, and family feeling.

- And leadership is even more lacking in our personal lives. We're into managing with efficiency, setting and achieving goals before we have even clarified our values.

3.2.5 Rescripting: Become Your Own First Creator

- The two additional unique human endowments that enable us to expand our proactivity and to exercise personal leadership in our lives are imagination and conscience.
- Through imagination, we can visualize the uncreated worlds of potential that lie within us.

Through conscience, we can come in contact with universal laws or principles with our own singular talents and avenues of contribution, and with the personal guidelines within which we can most effectively develop them.

- Because we already live with many scripts that have been handed to us, the process of writing our own script is actually more a process of "rescripting," or Paradigm Shifting – of changing some of the basic paradigms that we already have.
- In developing our own self-awareness many of us discover ineffective scripts, deeply embedded habits that are totally unworthy of us, totally incongruent with the things we really value in life.

Habit 2 says we don't have to live with those scripts.

We are response-able to use our imagination and creativity to write new ones that are more effective, more congruent with our deepest values and with the correct principles that give our values meaning.

- To Begin with the End in Mind means to approach my role as a parent, as well as my other roles in life, with my values and directions clear.

It also means to begin each day with those values firmly in mind. I don't have to react to the emotion, the circumstance. I can be truly proactive, value driven, because my values are clear.

3.2.6 A Personal Mission Statement

- The most effective way I know to Begin with the End in Mind is to develop a personal mission statement or philosophy or creed.

It focuses on what you want to be (character) and to do (contributions and achievements) and on the values or principles upon which being and doing are based.

- A personal mission statement based on correct principles becomes personal constitution, the basis for making major, life-directing decisions, the basis for making daily decisions in the midst of the circumstances and emotions that affect our lives. It empowers individuals with the same timeless strength in the midst of change.

- People can't live with change if there's not a changeless core inside them. The key to the ability to change is a changeless sense of who you are, what you are about and what you value.
- With a mission statement, we can flow with changes. We don't need prejudgments or prejudices. We don't need to figure out everything else in life, to stereotype and categorize everything and everybody in order to accommodate reality.
- Our personal environment is also changing at an ever-increasing pace. Such rapid change burns out a large number of people who feel they can hardly handle it, can hardly cope with life. They become reactive and essentially give up, hoping that the things that happen to them will be good.
- Once you have that sense of mission, you have the essence of your own proactivity. You have the vision and the values which direct your life. You have the basic direction from which you set your long- and short-term goals. You have the power of a written constitution based on correct principles, against which every decision concerning the most effective use of your time, your talents, and your energies can be effectively measured.

3.2.7 At The Center

- In order to write a personal mission statement, we must begin at the very center of our Circle of Influence, that center comprised of our most basic Our paradigms, the lens through which we see the world.
- It is here that we deal with our vision and our values.
- It is also here that our focused efforts achieve the greatest results. As we work within the very center of our Circle of Influence, we expand it.
- Whatever is at the center of our life will be the source of our security, guidance, wisdom, and power.
 - Security represents your sense of worth, your identity, your emotional anchorage, your self-esteem, your basic personal strength or lack of it.
 - Guidance means your source of direction in life. Encompassed by your map, your internal frame of reference that interprets for you what is happening out there, are standards or principles or implicit criteria that govern moment-by-moment decision-making and doing.
 - Wisdom is your perspective on life, your sense of balance, your understanding of how the various parts and principles apply and relate to each other. It embraces judgment, discernment, comprehension. It is a gestalt or oneness, an integrated wholeness.
 - Power is the faculty or capacity to act, the strength and potency to accomplish something. It is the vital energy to make choices and decisions. It also includes the capacity to overcome deeply embedded habits and to cultivate higher, more effective ones.
- These four factors – security, guidance, wisdom, and power – are interdependent.

Security and clear guidance bring true wisdom, and wisdom becomes the spark or catalyst to release and direct power.

- Your security lies somewhere on the continuum between extreme insecurity on one end, wherein your life is buffeted by all the fickle forces that play upon it, and a deep sense of high intrinsic worth and personal security on the other end.
- Your guidance ranges on the continuum from dependence on the social mirror or other unstable, fluctuating sources to strong inner direction.
- Your wisdom falls somewhere between a totally inaccurate map where everything is distorted and nothing seems to fit, and a complete and accurate map of life wherein all the parts and principles are properly related to each other.
- Your power lies somewhere between immobilization or being a puppet pulled by someone else's strings to high proactivity, the power to act according to your own values instead of being acted upon by other people and circumstances.

3.2.8 Alterative Centers

- Each of us has a center, though we usually don't recognize it as such.
- Let's briefly examine several centers or core paradigms people typically have:
 - Spouse Centeredness.
 - * security:
 - Your feelings of security are based on the way your spouse treats you.
 - You are highly vulnerable to the moods and feelings of your spouse.
 - There is deep disappointment resulting in conflict when your spouse disagrees with you or does not meet your expectations.
 - Anything that may impinge on the relationship is perceived as a threat.
 - * guidance:
 - Your direction comes from your own needs and wants and from those of your spouse.
 - Your decision-making criterion is limited to what you think is best for your marriage or your mate, or to the preference and opinions of your spouse.
 - * wisdom:
 - Your life perspective surrounds things which may positively or negatively influence your spouse or your relationship.
 - * power:
 - Your power to act is limited by weakness in yourself and your spouse.
 - Family Centeredness.
 - * security:
 - Your security is founded on family acceptance and fulfilling family expectations.
 - Your sense of personal security is as volatile as the family.

- Your feeling of family worth are based on the family reputation.
- * guidance:
 - Family scripting is your source of correct attitudes and behaviors.
 - Your decision-making criterion is what is good for the family, or what family members want.
- * wisdom:
 - Your interpret all of life in terms of your family, creating a partial understanding and family narcissism.
- * power:
 - Your actions are limited by family models and traditions.
- Money Centeredness.
 - * security:
 - Your personal worth is determined by your net worth.
 - You are vulnerable to anything that threatens your economic security.
 - * guidance:
 - Profit is your decision-making criterion.
 - * wisdom:
 - Money-making is the lens through which life is seen and understood, creating imbalanced judgment.
 - * power:
 - You are restricted to what you can accomplish with your money and your limited vision.
- Work Centeredness.
 - * security:
 - You tend to define yourself by your occupational role.
 - You are only comfortable when you are working.
 - * guidance:
 - You make your decisions based on the needs and expectations of your work.
 - * wisdom:
 - You tend to be limited to your work role.
 - * power:
 - Your actions are limited by work role models, organizational constraints, occupational opportunities, your boss's perceptions, and your possible inability at some point in your life to do that particular work.

– Possession Centeredness.

* security:

- Your security is based on your reputation, your social status, or the tangible things you possess.
- You tend to compare what you have to what others have.

* guidance:

- You make your decisions based on what will protect, increase, or better display your possessions.

* wisdom:

- You see the world in terms of comparative economic and social relationships

* power:

- You function within the limits of what you can buy or the social prominence you can achieve.

– Pleasure Centeredness.

* security:

- Your security is a function of the social mirror.
- You are highly dependent on the opinions of others.

* guidance:

- Your decision criterion is “What will they think?”
- You are easily embarrassed.

* wisdom:

- You see the world through a social lens.

* power:

- You are limited by your social comfort zone.
- Your actions are as fickle as opinion.

– Enemy Centeredness.

– Church Centeredness.

– Self-Centeredness.

* security:

- Your security is constantly changing and shifting.

* guidance:

- Your judgement criteria are: “If it feels good”, “What I want”, “What I need”, “What ’s in it for me?”

* wisdom:

- Your view the world by how decisions, events or circumstances will affect you.

* power:

- Your ability to act is limited to your own resources, without the benefits of interdependency.

3.2.9 Identify Your Center

- Perhaps the best way to identify your own center is to look closely at *your life-support factors. If you can identify with one or more of the descriptions above, you can trace it back to the center from which it flows, a center which may be limiting your personal effectiveness.
- More often than not, a person’s center is some combination of these and/or other centers.
- Most people are very much a function of a variety of influences that play upon their lives. Depending on external or internal conditions, one particular center may be activated until the underlying needs are satisfied. Then another center becomes the compelling force.
- The ideal, of course, is to create one clear center from which you consistently derive a high degree of security, guidance, wisdom, and power, empowering your proactivity and giving congruency and harmony to every part of your life.

3.2.10 A Principle Center

- By centering our lives on correct principles, we create a solid foundation for development of the four life-support factors.
- Correct principles do not change. We can depend on them.
- Principles don’t react to anything. They don’t depend on the behavior of others, the environment, or the current fad for their validity. Principles don’t die.
- Principles are deep, fundamental truths, classic truths, generic common denominators.
- Even in the midst of people or circumstances that seem to ignore the principles, we can be secure in the knowledge that principles are bigger than people or circumstances.
- Admittedly, we’re not omniscient. Our knowledge and understanding of correct principles is limited.
- We are limited, but we can push back the borders of our limitations.
- The wisdom and guidance that accompany principle-centered living come from correct maps, from the way things really are, have been, and will be. Correct maps enable us to clearly see where we want to go and how to get there. We can make our decisions using the correct data that will make their implementation possible and meaningful.

- The personal power that comes from principle-centered living is the power of a self-aware, knowledgeable, proactive individual, unrestricted by the attitudes, behaviors, and actions of others or by many of the circumstances and environmental influences that limit other people.
- The only real limitation of power is the natural consequences of the principles themselves. We are free to choose our actions, based on our knowledge of correct principles, but we are not free to choose the consequences of those actions.
- By centering our lives on timeless, unchanging principles, we create a fundamental paradigm of effective living. It is the center that puts all other centers in perspective.
- Remember that your paradigm is the source from which your attitudes and behaviors flow.
- Principle Centeredness.
 - security:
 - * Your security is based on correct principles that do not change, regardless of external conditions or circumstances.
 - * You know that true principles can repeatedly be validated in your own life, through your own experiences.
 - * As a measurement of self-improvement, correct principles function with exactness, consistency, beauty and strength.
 - * Correct principles help you understand your own development, endowing you with the confidence to learn more, thereby increasing your knowledge and understanding.
 - * Your source of security provides you with an immovable, unchanging, unfailing core enabling you to see change as an exciting adventure and opportunity to make significant contributions.
 - guidance:
 - * You are guided by a compass which enables you to see where you want to go and how you will get there.
 - * You use accurate data which makes your decisions both implementable and meaningful.
 - * You stand apart from life's situations, and circumstances and look at the balanced whole.
 - * Your decisions and actions reflect both short and long-term considerations and implications.
 - * In every situation, you consciously, proactively determine the best alternative, basing decisions on conscience educated by principles.
 - wisdom:
 - * Your judgment encompasses a broad spectrum of long-term consequences and reflects a wise balance and quiet assurance.

- * You see things differently and thus you think and act differently from the largely reactive world.
 - * You view the world through a fundamental paradigm for effective, provident living.
 - * You see the world in terms of what you can do for the world and its people.
 - * You adopt a proactive lifestyle, seeking to serve and build others.
 - * You interpret all of life's experiences in terms of opportunities for learning and contribution.
- power:
- * Your power is limited only by your understanding and observance of natural law and correct principles and by the natural consequences of the principles themselves.
 - * You become a self-aware, knowledgeable, proactive individual, largely unrestricted by the attitudes, behaviors, or actions of others.
 - * Your ability to act reaches far beyond your own resources and encourages highly developed levels of interdependency.
 - * Your decisions and actions are not driven by your current financial or circumstantial limitations.
 - * You experience an interdependent freedom.

3.2.11 Writing and Using a Personal Mission Statement

- As we go deeply within ourselves, as we understand and realign our basic paradigms to bring them in harmony with correct principles, we create both an effective, empowering center and a clear lens through which we can see the world. We can then focus that lens on how we, as unique individuals, relate to that world.
- We detect rather than invent our missions in life.

Each of us has an internal monitor or sense, a conscience, that gives us an awareness of our own uniqueness and the singular contributions that we can make.

- In seeking to give verbal expression to that uniqueness, we are again reminded of the fundamental importance of proactivity and of working within our Circle of Influence.
- Man should not ask what the meaning of his life is, but rather must recognize that it is he who is asked. In a word, each man is questioned by life; and he can only answer to life by answering for his own life; to life he can only respond by being responsible.
- Personal responsibility, or proactivity, is fundamental to the first creation. Habit 1 says “You are the programmer.” Habit 2, then, says, “Write the program.”
- A mission statement is not something you write overnight. It takes deep introspection, careful analysis, thoughtful expression, and often many rewrites to produce it in final form.

Even then, you will want to review it regularly and make minor changes as the years bring additional insights or changing circumstances.

- I find the process is as important as the product. Writing or reviewing a mission statement changes you because it forces you to think through your priorities deeply, carefully, and to align your behavior with your beliefs.

3.2.12 Using Your Whole Brain

- Our self-awareness empowers us to examine our own thoughts. This is particularly helpful in creating a personal mission statement because the two unique human endowments that enable us to practice Habit 2 – imagination and conscience – are primarily functions of the right side of the brain.

Understanding how to tap into that right brain capacity greatly increases our first-creation ability.

3.2.13 Two Ways to Tap the Right Brain

- The quality of our first creation is significantly impacted by our ability to use our creative right brain.
- The two ways to tap the right brain:
 - Expand Perspective
 - Visualization and Affirmation

3.2.14 Expand Perspective

- Sometimes we are knocked out of our left-brain environment and thought patterns and into the right brain by an unplanned experience.
- If you're proactive, you don't have to wait for circumstances or other people to create perspective-expanding experiences. You can consciously create your own.
- Expand your mind. Visualize in rich detail. Involve as many emotions and feelings as possible. Involve as many of the senses as you can.
- Things are suddenly placed in a different perspective. Values quickly surface that before weren't even recognized.

3.2.15 Visualization and Affirmation

- Personal leadership is not a singular experience. It doesn't begin and end with the writing of a personal mission statement.
- It is, rather, the ongoing process of keeping your vision and values before you and aligning your life to be congruent with those most important things.
- And in that effort, your powerful right-brain capacity can be a great help to you on a daily basis as you work to integrate your personal mission statement into your life. It's another application of "Begin with the End in Mind."
- A good affirmation has five basic ingredients:
 - it's personal,

- it's positive,
 - it's present tense,
 - it's visual,
 - and it's emotional.
- The more clearly and vividly I can imagine the detail, the more deeply I will experience it, the less I will see it as a spectator.
 - Affirmation and visualization are forms of programming, and we must be certain that we do not submit ourselves to any programming that is not in harmony with our basic center or that comes from sources centered on money-making, self interest, or anything other than correct principles.
 - I believe the higher use of imagination is in harmony with the use of conscience to transcend self and create a life of contribution based on unique purpose and on the principles that govern interdependent reality.

3.2.16 Identifying Roles and Goals

- We each have a number of different roles in our lives – different areas or capacities in which we have responsibility. And each of these roles is important.
- One of the major problems that arises when people work to become more effective in life is that they don't think broadly enough.

They lose the sense of proportion, the balance, the natural ecology necessary to effective living.
- You may find that your mission statement will be much more balanced, much easier to work with, if you break it down into the specific role areas of your life and the goals you want to accomplish in each area.
- Writing your mission in terms of the important roles in your life gives you balance and harmony. It keeps each role clearly before you. You can review your roles frequently to make sure that you don't get totally absorbed by one role to the exclusion of others that are equally or even more important in your life.
- After you identify your various roles, then you can think about the long term goals you want to accomplish in each of those roles.
- If these goals are the extension of a mission statement based on correct principles, they will be vitally different from the goals people normally set. They will be in harmony with correct principles, with natural laws, which gives you greater power to achieve them. They are your goals. They reflect your deepest values, your unique talent, your sense of mission. And they grow out of your chosen roles in life.
- An effective goal focuses primarily on results rather than activity. It identifies where you want to be, and, in the process, helps you determine where you are. It gives meaning and purpose to all you do.
- Roles and goals give structure and organized direction to your personal mission.

3.2.17 Organizational Mission Statements

- Mission statements are also vital to successful organizations.
- One of the fundamental problems in organizations, including families, is that people are not committed to the determinations of other people for their lives. They simply don't buy into them.
- Many times as I work with organizations, I find people whose goals are totally different from the goals of the enterprise. I commonly find reward systems completely out of alignment with stated value systems.
- Without involvement, there is no commitment.
- That's why creating an organizational mission statement takes time, patience, involvement, skill, and empathy. Again, it's not a quick fix. It takes time and sincerity, correct principles, and the courage and integrity to align systems, structure, and management style to the shared vision and values. But it's based on correct principles and it works.
- An organizational mission statement – one that truly reflects the deep shared vision and values of everyone within that organization – creates a great unity and tremendous commitment.

3.3 Habit 3: Put First Things First – Principles of Personal Management

1. Habit 1 says, “You're the creator. You are in charge.” It's based on the four unique human endowments of imagination, conscience, independent will, and particularly, self-awareness.
2. Habit 2 is the first or mental creation. It's based on imagination and conscience. It's the deep contact with our basic paradigms and values and the vision of what we can become.
3. Habit 3, then, is the second creation – the physical creation. It's the exercise of independent will toward becoming principle-centered.

My own maxim of personal effectiveness is this: Manage from the left; lead from the right.

3.3.1 The Power of Independent Will

- In addition to self-awareness, imagination, and conscience, it is the fourth human endowment – independent will – that really makes effective self-management possible. It is the ability to make decisions and choices and to act in accordance with them.
- The degree to which we have developed our independent will in our everyday lives is measured by our personal integrity. Integrity is, fundamentally, the value we place on ourselves. It's our ability to make and keep commitments to ourselves.
- Effective management is putting first things first. While leadership decides what “first things” are, it is management that puts them first, day-by-day, moment-by-moment. Management is discipline, carrying it out.

3.3.2 Four Generations of Time Management

- The best thinking in the area of time management can be captured in a single phrase: Organize and execute around priorities.

- In the area of time management, there are four generations of efforts. Each generation builds on the one before it.
 1. The first wave or generation could be characterized by notes and checklists
 2. The second generation could be characterized by calendars and appointment books.
 3. The third generation reflects the current time-management field. It adds to those preceding generations the important idea of prioritization, of clarifying values, and of comparing the relative worth of activities based on their relationship to those values. In addition, it focuses on setting goals – specific long-, intermediate-, and short-term targets toward which time and energy would be directed in harmony with values. It also includes the concept of daily planning, of making a specific plan to accomplish those goals and activities determined to be of greatest worth.
 4. The essential focus of the fourth generation of management can be captured in the Time Management Matrix diagrammed on the next page. The challenge is not to manage time, but to manage ourselves. Satisfaction is a function of expectation as well as realization. And expectation (and satisfaction) lie in our Circle of Influence.

3.3.3 Quadrant II

- The two factors that define an activity are urgent and important.
 - Urgent means it requires immediate attention. Urgent matters are usually visible. They press on us; they insist on action.
 - Importance, on the other hand, has to do with results. If something is important, it contributes to your mission, your values, your high priority goals.
- We react to urgent matters.

Important matters that are not urgent require more initiative, more proactivity.
- Look for a moment at the four quadrants in the Time Management Matrix.
 1. Quadrant I is both urgent and important. It deals with significant results that require immediate attention. We usually call the activities in Quadrant I “crises” or “problems.” Quadrant I consumes many people. They are crisis managers, problem-minded people, the deadline-driven producers.

As long as you focus on Quadrant I, it keeps getting bigger and bigger until it dominates you.
 2. Quadrant II is not urgent but important. Quadrant II is the heart of effective personal management. It consists of all prevention, planning, relationship building and capacity-building activities.
 3. Quadrant III is urgent but not important. These are interruptions, meetings, mails, calls etc. The reality is that the urgency of these matters is often based on the priorities and expectations of others.
 4. Quadrant IV is neither urgent nor important. Some people are literally beaten up by the problems all day every day. The only relief they have is in escaping to the not important, not urgent activities of Quadrant IV.

- Effective people stay out of Quadrants III and IV because, urgent or not, they aren't important.

They also shrink Quadrant I down to size by spending more time in Quadrant II.

- In Quadrant II, It deals with things like building relationships, writing a personal mission statement, long-range planning, exercising, preventive maintenance, preparation – all those things we know we need to do, but somehow seldom get around to doing, because they aren't urgent.
- Effective people are not problem-minded; they're opportunity-minded. They feed opportunities and starve problems. They think preventively.

They keep P and PC in balance by focusing on the important, but not the urgent, high-leverage capacity-building activities of Quadrant II.

- What one thing could you do in your personal and professional life that, if you did on a regular basis, would make a tremendous positive difference in your life? Quadrant II activities have that kind of impact. Our effectiveness takes the quantum leaps when we do them.

3.3.4 What It Takes to say “No”

- The only place to get time for Quadrant II in the beginning is from Quadrants III and IV. You can't ignore the urgent and important activities of Quadrant I, although it will shrink in size as you spend more time with prevention and preparation in Quadrant II. But the initial time for Quadrant II has come out of III and IV.
- You have to be proactive to work on Quadrant II because Quadrant I and III work on you. To say “yes” to important Quadrant II priorities, you have to learn to say “no” to other activities, sometimes apparently urgent things.
- You have to decide what your highest priorities are and have the courage – pleasantly, smiling, nonapologetically – to say “no” to other things. And the way you do that is by having abigger “yes” burning inside.

Only when you have the self-awareness to examine your program – and the imagination and conscience to create a new, unique, principle-centered program to which you can say “yes” – only then will you have sufficient independent will power to say “no,” with a genuine smile, to the unimportant.

- The enemy of the “best” is often the “good.” Even when the urgent is good, the good can keep you from your best, keep you from your unique contributions, if you let it.
- The essence of effective time and life management is to organize and execute around balanced priorities. Then I ask this question: if you were to fault yourself in one of three areas, which would it be:

1. the inability to prioritize;
2. the inability or desire to organize around those priorities;
3. or the lack of discipline to execute around them, to stay with your priorities and organization?

Most people say their main fault is a lack of discipline. On deeper thought, I believe that is not the case. The basic problem is that their priorities have not become deeply planted in their hearts and minds. They haven't really internalized Habit 2.

- Without a principle center and a personal mission statement, they don't have the necessary foundation to sustain their efforts.
- A Quadrant II focus is a paradigm that grows out of a principle center. Your independent will alone cannot effectively discipline you against your center.
- In the words of the architectural maxim, form follows function. Likewise, management follows leadership. The way you spend your time is a result of the way you see your time and the way you really see your priorities.

3.3.5 Moving into Quadrant II

- If Quadrant II activities are clearly the heart of effective personal management – the “first things” we need to put first – then how do we organize and execute around those things?
 1. The first generation of time management does not even recognize the concept of priority.
 2. Second-generation managers assume a little more control. They plan and schedule in advance and generally are seen as more responsible because they “show up” when they’re supposed to.

But again, the activities they schedule have no priority or recognized correlation to deeper values and goals. They have few significant achievements and tend to be schedule-oriented.

3. Third-generation managers take a significant step forward. They clarify their values and set goals. They plan each day and prioritize their activities. But this third generation has some critical limitations. First, it limits vision, in the form of “daily planning”. The very language “daily planning” focuses on the urgent.

In addition, the third generation makes no provision for managing roles in a balanced way. And its efficiency, time-management focus tends to strain relationships rather than build them.

Even the third generation, with its vast array of planners and materials, focuses primarily on helping people prioritize and plan their Quadrant I and III activities.

3.3.6 The Quadrant II Tool

- The objective of Quadrant II management is to manage our lives effectively
 1. from a center of sound principles,
 2. for a knowledge of our personal mission,
 3. with a focus on the important as well as the urgent,
 4. and within the framework of maintaining a balance between increasing our Production and increasing our Production Capability

- A Quadrant II organizer will need to meet six important criteria.
 - Coherence: Coherence suggests that there is harmony, unity, and integrity between your vision and mission, your roles and goals, your priorities and plans, and your desires and discipline.
 - Balance: Your tool should help you to keep balance in your life, to identify your various roles and keep them right in front of you, so that you don't neglect important areas such as your health, your family, professional preparation, or personal development.
 - Quadrant II Focus: You need a tool that encourages you, motivates you, actually helps you spend the time you need in Quadrant II, so that you're dealing with prevention rather than prioritizing crises.

Organizing on a weekly basis provides much greater balance and context than daily planning. The key is not to prioritize what's on your schedule, but to schedule your priorities.

- A “People” Dimension: You also need a tool that deals with people, not just schedules. While you can think in terms of efficiency in dealing with time, a principle-centered person thinks in terms of effectiveness in dealing with people. Your tool needs to reflect that value, to facilitate implementation rather than create guilt when a schedule is not followed.
- Flexibility: Your planning tool should be your servant, never your master.
- Portability: Your tool should also be portable, so that you can carry it with you most of the time.

3.3.7 Becoming A Quadrant II Self-Manager

- Quadrant II organizing involves four key activities:

1. Identifying Roles: The first task is to write down your key roles.

You don't need to worry about defining the roles in a way that you will live with for the rest of your life – just consider the week and write down the areas you see yourself spending time in during the next seven days.

2. Selecting Goals: The next step is to think of two or three important results you feel you should accomplish in each role during the next seven days. These would be recorded as goals.

At least some of these goals should reflect Quadrant II activities. Ideally, these short-term goals would be tied to the longer-term goals you have identified in conjunction with your personal mission statement.

3. Scheduling: Now you look at the week ahead with your goals in mind and schedule time to achieve them.

Having identified roles and set goals, you can translate each goal to a specific day of the week, either as a priority item or, even better, as a specific appointment.

You can also check your annual or monthly calendar for any appointments you may have previously made and evaluate their importance in the context of your goals, transferring those you decide to keep to your schedule and making plans to reschedule or cancel others.

4. Daily Adapting: With Quadrant II weekly organizing, daily planning becomes more a function of daily adapting, or prioritizing activities and responding to unanticipated events, relationships, and experiences in a meaningful way.

Taking a few minutes each morning to review your schedule can put you in touch with the value-based decisions you made as you organized the week as well as unanticipated factors that may have come up.

As you overview the day, you can see that your roles and goals provide a natural prioritization that grows out of your innate sense of balance.

3.3.8 Living It

- Living it is primarily a function of our independent will, our self-discipline, our integrity, and commitment – not to short-term goals and schedules or to the impulse of the moment, but to the correct principles and our own deepest values, which give meaning and context to our goals, our schedules, and our lives.
- The popularity of reacting to the urgent but unimportant priorities of other people in Quadrant III or the pleasure of escaping to Quadrant IV will threaten to overpower the important Quadrant II activities you have planned.
- Your principle center, your self-awareness, and your conscience can provide a high degree of intrinsic security, guidance, and wisdom to empower you to use your independent will and maintain integrity to the truly important.
- Again, you simply can't think efficiency with people. You think effectiveness with people and efficiency with things.

3.3.9 Advances of the Fourth Generation

- The efficiency paradigm of the third generation of management is out of harmony with the principle that people are more important than things.
- The fourth-generation tool recognizes that the first person you need to consider in terms of effectiveness rather than efficiency is yourself.
- The fourth generation of self-management is more advanced than the third in five important ways. The fourth generation of self-management is more advanced than the third in five important ways.
 1. First, it's principle-centered.
 2. Second, it's conscience-directed.
 3. Third, it defines your unique mission, including values and long-term goals.
 4. Fourth, it helps you balance your life by identifying roles, and by setting goals and scheduling activities in each key role every week.

5. And fifth, it gives greater context through weekly organizing, rising above the limiting perspective of a single day and putting you in touch with your deepest values through review of your key roles.

3.3.10 Delegation: Increasing P and PC

- We accomplish all that we do through delegation – either to time or to other people. If we delegate to time, we think efficiency. If we delegate to other people, we think effectiveness.
- Effectively delegating to others is perhaps the single most powerful high-leverage activity there is.
- Transferring responsibility to other skilled and trained people enables you to give your energies to other high-leverage activities. Delegation means growth, both for individuals and for organizations.
- Because delegation involves other people, it is a Public Victory and could well be included in Habit 4. But because we are focusing here on principles of personal management, and the ability to delegate to others is the main difference between the role of manager and independent producer, I am approaching delegation from the standpoint of your personal managerial skills.
- Management is essentially moving the fulcrum over, and the key to effective management is delegation.

3.3.11 Gofer Delegation

- There are basically two kinds of delegation: “gofer delegation” and “stewardship delegation.”
 - Gofer delegation means “Go for this, go for that, do this, do that, and tell me when it’s done.” If they are given a position of supervision or management, they still think like producers. Because they are focused on methods, they become responsible for the results.

3.3.12 Stewardship Delegation

- – Stewardship delegation is focused on results instead of methods. It gives people a choice of method and makes them responsible for results. It takes more time in the beginning, but it’s time well invested. You can move the fulcrum over, you can increase your leverage, through stewardship delegation.
- Stewardship delegation involves clear, up-front mutual understanding and commitment regarding expectations in five areas.
 - Desired Results: Create a clear, mutual understanding of what needs to be accomplished, focusing on what, not how; results, not methods.
 - Guidelines: Identify the parameters within which the individual should operate. These should be as few as possible to avoid methods delegation, but should include any formidable restrictions.

If you know the failure paths of the job, identify them. Be honest and open

- Resources: Identify the human, financial, technical, or organizational resources the person can draw on to accomplish the desired results.
- Accountability: Set up the standards of performance that will be used in evaluating the results and the specific times when reporting and evaluation will take place.
- Consequences: Specify what will happen, both good and bad, as a result of the evaluation.
- Trust is the highest form of human motivation. It brings out the very best in people. But it takes time and patience, and it doesn't preclude the necessity to train and develop people so that their competency can rise to the level of that trust.
- I am convinced that if stewardship delegation is done correctly, both parties will benefit and ultimately much more work will get done in much less time.

3.3.13 The Quadrant II Paradigm

- The key to effective management of self, or of others through delegation, is not in any technique or tool or extrinsic factor. It is intrinsic – in the Quadrant II paradigm that empowers you to see through the lens of importance rather than urgency.

4 Public Victory

Before moving into the area of Public Victory, we should remember that effective interdependence can only be built on a foundation of true independence. Private Victory precedes Public Victory.

4.1 Paradigms of Interdependence

4.1.1 The Emotional Bank Account

- An Emotional Bank Account is a metaphor that describes the amount of trust that's been built up in a relationship. It's the feeling of safeness you have with another human being.
- If I make deposits into an Emotional Bank Account with you through courtesy, kindness, honesty, and keeping my commitments to you, I build up a reserve.

Your trust toward me becomes higher, and I can call upon that trust many times if I need to. I can even make mistakes and that trust level, that emotional reserve, will compensate for it.

- Remember that quick fix is a mirage. Building and repairing relationships takes time.

4.1.2 Six Major Deposits

- Let me suggest six major deposits that build the Emotional Bank Account:
 - Understanding the Individual: Seeking to understand another person is probably one of the most important deposits you can make, and it is the key to every other deposit. You simply don't know what constitutes a deposit to another person until you understand that individual.

To make a deposit, what is important to another person must be as important to you as the other person is to you.

- Attending to the Little Things: The little kindnesses and courtesies are so important. Small discourtesies, little unkindnesses, little forms of disrespect make large withdrawals. In relationships, the little things are the big things.

People are very tender, very sensitive inside.

- Keeping Commitments: Keeping a commitment or a promise is a major deposit; breaking one is a major withdrawal.
- Clarifying Expectations: The deposit is to make the expectations clear and explicit in the beginning.
- Showing Personal Integrity: Personal integrity generates trust and is the basis of many different kinds of deposits.
- Apologizing Sincerely When You Make a Withdrawal: When we make withdrawals from the Emotional Bank Account, we need to apologize and we need to do it sincerely. Great deposits come in the sincere words.

4.1.3 Attending to the Little Things

- The little kindnesses and courtesies are so important. Small discourtesies, little unkindnesses, little forms of disrespect make large withdrawals.
- In relationships, the little things are the big things.
- People are very tender, very sensitive inside.

4.1.4 Keeping Commitments

- Keeping a commitment or a promise is a major deposit; breaking one is a major withdrawal.
- In fact, there's probably not a more massive withdrawal than to make a promise that's important to someone and then not to come through. The next time a promise is made, they won't believe it.

4.1.5 Clarifying Expectations

- Many expectations are implicit. They haven't been explicitly stated or announced, but people nevertheless bring them to a particular situation. Although these expectations have not been discussed, or sometimes even recognized by the person who has them, fulfilling them makes great deposits in the relationship and violating them makes withdrawals.
- That's why it's so important whenever you come into a new situation to get all the expectations out on the table. People will begin to judge each other through those expectations.
- We create many negative situations by simply assuming that our expectations are self-evident and that they are clearly understood and shared by other people.
- The deposit is to make the expectations clear and explicit in the beginning.

4.1.6 Showing Personal Integrity

- Personal integrity generates trust and is the basis of many different kinds of deposits.
- Integrity includes but goes beyond honesty. Honesty is telling the truth – in other words, conforming our words to reality. Integrity is conforming reality to our words – in other words, keeping promises and fulfilling expectations. This requires an integrated character, a oneness, primarily with self but also with life.
- One of the most important ways to manifest integrity is to be loyal to those who are not present. In doing so, we build the trust of those who are present. When you defend those who are absent, you retain the trust of those present.
- Integrity in an interdependent reality is simply this: you treat everyone by the same set of principles. As you do, people will come to trust you.

4.1.7 Apologizing Sincerely When You Make a Withdrawal

- When we make withdrawals from the Emotional Bank Account, we need to apologize and we need to do it sincerely. Great deposits come in the sincere words.
- It takes a great deal of character strength to apologize quickly out of one's heart rather than out of pity. A person must possess himself and have a deep sense of security in fundamental principles and values in order to genuinely apologize.

People with little internal security can't do it. It makes them too vulnerable.

- Sincere apologies make deposits; repeated apologies interpreted as insincere make withdrawals. And the quality of the relationship reflects it.
- It is one thing to make a mistake, and quite another thing not to admit it.

4.1.8 The Laws of Love and the Laws of Life

- When we make deposits of unconditional love, when we live the primary laws of love, we encourage others to live the primary laws of life.
- In other words, when we truly love others without condition, without strings, we help them feel secure and safe and validated and affirmed in their essential worth, identity, and integrity.
- Their natural growth process is encouraged. We make it easier for them to live the laws of life – cooperation, contribution, self-discipline, integrity – and to discover and live true to the highest and best within them.
- When we violate the primary laws of love – when we attach strings and conditions to that gift – we actually encourage others to violate the primary laws of life.

We put them in a reactive, defensive position where they feel they have to prove “I matter as a person, independent of you.”

4.1.9 P Problems are PC Opportunities

- This experience also taught me another powerful paradigm of interdependence.

- The very problem created the opportunity to build a deep relationship that empowered us to work together as a strong complementary team.
- By recognizing that the P/PC Balance is necessary to effectiveness in an interdependent reality, we can value our problems as opportunities to increase PC.

4.2 Habit 4: Think Win/Win – Principles of Interpersonal Leadership

4.2.1 Six Paradigms of Human Interaction

- Win-win is not a technique; it's a total philosophy of human interaction.
- There are six paradigms of human interaction:
 - Win/Win. Win-win is a frame of mind and heart that constantly seeks mutual benefit in all human interactions. Win-win means that agreements or solutions are mutually beneficial, mutually satisfying.

Win/Win sees life as a cooperative, not a competitive arena.

Win/Win is a belief in the Third Alternative. It's not your way or my way; it's a better way, a higher way.

- Win/Lose. In leadership style, Win/Lose is the authoritarian approach. Most people have been deeply scripted in the Win/Lose mentality since birth.

It's based on power and position rather than on principle.

Certainly there is a place for Win/Lose thinking in truly competitive and low-trust situations. But most of life is not a competition.

- Lose/Win. Lose/Win is worse than Win/Lose because it has no standards – no demands, no expectations, no vision.

People who think Lose/Win are usually quick to please or appease. They seek strength from popularity or acceptance. They have little courage to express their own feelings and convictions and are easily intimidated by the ego strength of others.

In negotiation, Lose/Win is seen as capitulation – giving in or giving up. In leadership style, it's permissiveness or indulgence. Lose/Win means being a nice guy, even if "nice guys finish last".

- Lose/Lose. When two Win/Lose people get together – that is, when two determined, stubborn, ego-invested individuals interact – the result will be Lose/Lose. Both will lose.

Lose/Lose is also the philosophy of the highly dependent person without inner direction who is miserable and thinks everyone else should be, too. "If nobody ever wins, perhaps being a loser isn't so bad".

- Win. People with the win mentality don't necessarily want someone else to lose. That's irrelevant.

When there is no sense of contest or competition, win is probably the most common approach in everyday negotiation. A person with the win mentality thinks in terms of securing his own ends – and leaving it to others to secure theirs.

– Win/Win or No Deal.

- The best choice, then, depends on reality. The challenge is to read that reality accurately and not to translate win/lose or other scripting into every situation.
- Most situations, in fact, are part of an interdependent reality, and then win/win is really the only viable alternative of the five.
 - Win/lose is not viable because, although I appear to win in a confrontation with you, your feelings, your attitudes toward me and our relationship have been affected.
 - If we come up with a lose/win, you may appear to get what you want for the moment. You may carry battle scars with me into any future negotiations.
 - if I focus on my own win and don't even consider your point of view, there's no basis for any kind of productive relationship.

4.2.2 Win/Win or No Deal

- If these individuals had not come up with a synergistic solution – one that was agreeable to both – they could have gone for an even higher expression of win/win, Win/Win or No Deal.
- No deal basically means that if we can't find a solution that would benefit us both, we agree to disagree agreeably – no deal. No expectations have been created, no performance contracts established.
- Anything less than win-win in an interdependent reality is a poor second best that will have impact in the long-term relationship. The cost of the impact needs to be carefully considered.
- Win-Win or No Deal provides tremendous emotional freedom in the family relationship. If family members can't agree on a video that everyone will enjoy, they can simply decide to do something else – no deal – rather than having some enjoy the evening at the expense of others.
- The Win-Win or No Deal approach is most realistic at the beginning of a business relationship or enterprise. In a continuing business relationship, no deal may not be a viable option, which can create serious problems, especially for family businesses or businesses that are begun initially on the basis of friendship.
- Without no deal, many such businesses simply deteriorate and either fail or have to be turned over to professional managers.

4.2.3 Five Dimensions of Win/Win

- Think Win/Win is the habit of interpersonal leadership.
- Effective interpersonal leadership requires the vision, the proactive initiative, and the security, guidance, wisdom, and power that come from principle-centered personal leadership.
- The principle of win-win is fundamental to success in all our interactions, and it embraces five interdependent dimensions of life. It begins with character and moves toward relationships, out of which flow agreements. It is nurtured in an environment where structure and systems are based on win/win. And it involves process; we cannot achieve win/win ends with win/lose or lose/win means.

4.2.4 Charater

- Character is the foundation of win/win, and everything else builds on that foundation. There are three character traits essential to the win-win paradigm.

- Integrity: We’ve already defined integrity as the value we place on ourselves. Habits 1, 2, and 3 help us develop and maintain integrity.

As we clearly identify our values and proactively organize and execute around those values on a daily basis, we develop self-awareness and independent will by making and keeping meaningful promises and commitments.

There’s no way to go for a win in our own lives if we don’t even know, in a deep sense, what constitutes a win – what is, in fact, harmonious with our innermost values.

- Maturity: Maturity is the balance between courage and consideration. If a person can express his feelings and convictions with courage balanced with consideration for the feelings and convictions of another person, he is mature, particularly if the issue is very important to both parties.

It is a deep embodiment of the P/PC Balance. Whether it’s called the ego strength/empathy balance, the self confidence/respect for others balance, the concern for people/concern for tasks balance, the quality sought for is the balance of what I call courage and consideration.

The basic task of leadership is to increase the standard of living and the quality of life for all stakeholders.

To achieve that balance between courage and consideration, is the essence of real maturity and is fundamental to win/win.

- Abundance Mentality: The third character trait essential to win/win is the Abundance Mentality, the paradigm that there is plenty out there for everybody. The Scarcity Mentality is the zero-sum paradigm of life.

People with a Scarcity Mentality have a very difficult time sharing recognition and credit, power or profit – even with those who help in the production. It’s almost as if something is being taken from them when someone else receives special recognition or windfall gain or has remarkable success or achievement.

Often, people with a Scarcity Mentality harbor secret hopes that others might suffer misfortune – not terrible misfortune, but acceptable misfortune that would keep them “in their place.” They’re always comparing, always competing. They give their energies to possessing things or other people in order to increase their sense of worth.

The Abundance Mentality, on the other hand, flows out of a deep inner sense of personal worth and security. It is the paradigm that there is plenty out there and enough to spare for everybody. It results in sharing of prestige, of recognition, of profits, of decision making. It opens possibilities, options, alternatives, and creativity.

The Abundance Mentality takes the personal joy, satisfaction, and fulfillment of Habits 1, 2, and 3 and turns it outward, appreciating the uniqueness, the inner direction, the proactive nature of others.

Public Victory does not mean victory over other people. It means success in effective interaction that brings mutually beneficial results to everyone involved. Public Victory means working together, communicating together, making things happen together that even the same people couldn't make happen by working independently. And Public Victory is an outgrowth of the Abundance Mentality paradigm.

- A character rich in integrity, maturity, and the Abundance Mentality has a genuineness that goes far beyond technique, or lack of it, in human interaction.

4.2.5 Relationships

- From the foundation of character, we build and maintain win-win relationships. The trust, the Emotional Bank Account, is the essence of win-win. Without trust, the best we can do is compromise; without trust, we lack the credibility for open, mutual learning and communication and real creativity.
- Enough deposits have been made so that you know and I know that we deeply respect each other.
- A relationship where bank accounts are high and both parties are deeply committed to win/win is the ideal springboard for tremendous synergy (Habit 6).
- Dealing with win/lose is the real test of win/win. Rarely is win/win easily achieved in any circumstance. Deep issues and fundamental differences have to be dealt with. But it is much easier when both parties are aware of and committed to it and where there is a high Emotional Bank Account in the relationship.
- When you're dealing with a person who is coming from a paradigm of win/lose, the relationship is still the key. The place to focus is on your Circle of Influence.

You make deposits into the Emotional Bank Account through genuine courtesy, respect, and appreciation for that person and for the other point of view. You stay longer in the communication process. You listen more, you listen in greater depth. You express yourself with greater courage. You aren't reactive. You go deeper inside yourself for strength of character to be proactive. You keep hammering it out until the other person begins to realize that you genuinely want the resolution to be a real win for both of you. That very process is a tremendous deposit in the Emotional Bank Account.

- It goes beyond transactional leadership into transformational leadership, transforming the individuals involved as well as the relationship.
- Remember that no deal is always an option. Or you may occasionally choose to go for the low form of win-win – compromise.
- It's important to realize that not all decisions need to be win-win, even when the Emotional Bank Account is high.
- An agreement means very little in letter without the character and relationship base to sustain it in spirit. So we need to approach win/win from a genuine desire to invest in the relationships that make it possible.

4.2.6 Agreements

- From relationships flow the agreements that give definition and direction to win/win. They are sometimes called performance agreements or partnership agreements, or shifting the paradigm of productive interaction from vertical to horizontal, from hovering supervision to self-supervision, from positioning to being partners in success.
- Win/Win Agreements cover a wide scope of interdependent interaction.
- In Win/Win agreement, the following five elements are made very explicit:
 - Desired results (not methods) identify what is to be done and when.
 - Guidelines specify the parameters (principles, policies, etc.) within which results are to be accomplished.
 - Resources identify the human, financial, technical, or organizational support available to help accomplish the results.
 - Accountability sets up the standards of performance and the time of evaluation.
 - Consequences specify – good and bad, natural and logical – what does and will happen as a result of the evaluation.

These five elements give Win-Win Agreements a life of their own. A clear mutual understanding and agreement up front in these areas creates a standard against which people can measure their own success.

4.2.7 Win/Win Performance Agreements

- Creating Win-Win Performance Agreements requires vital Paradigm Shifts. The focus is on results; not methods. Most of us tend to supervise methods. But Win-Win Agreements focus on results, releasing tremendous individual human potential and creating greater synergy, building PC in the process instead of focusing exclusively on P.
- With win-win accountability, people evaluate themselves.
- Developing such a Win-Win Agreement is the central activity of management. With an agreement in place, employees can manage themselves within the framework of that agreement.
- There are basically four kinds of consequences (rewards and penalties) that management or parents can control – financial, psychic, opportunity, and responsibility.
 - Financial consequences include such things as income, stock options, allowances, or penalties.
 - Psychic or psychological consequences include recognition, approval, respect, credibility, or the loss of them. Unless people are in a survival mode, psychic compensation is often more motivating than financial compensation.
 - Opportunity includes training, development, perks, and other benefits.

- Responsibility has to do with scope and authority, either of which can be enlarged or diminished.

4.2.8 Systems

- Win/win can only survive in an organization when *the systems support it. If you talk win/win but reward win/lose, you’ve got a losing program on your hands.
- You basically get what you reward. If you want to achieve the goals and reflect the values in your mission statement, then you need to align the reward system with these goals and values.
- Competition has its place in the marketplace or against last year’s performance – perhaps even against another office or individual where there is no particular interdependence, no need to cooperate.

But cooperation in the workplace is as important to free enterprise as competition in the marketplace. *The spirit of win/win cannot survive in an environment of competition and contests.

- For win/win to work, the systems have to support it. The training system, the planning system, the communication system, the budgeting system, the information system, the compensation system – all have to be based on the principle of win/win.
- So often the problem is in the system, not in the people. If you put good people in bad systems, you get bad results. You have to water the flowers you want to grow.
- As people really learn to Think Win/Win, they can set up the systems to create and reinforce it. They can transform unnecessarily competitive situations to cooperative ones and can powerfully impact their effectiveness by building both P and PC.

4.2.9 Processes

- There’s no way to achieve win-win ends with win/lose or lose/win means. So the question becomes how to arrive at a win/win solution.
- “principled” approach versus the “positional” approach to bargaining in their tremendously useful and insightful book.
- The essence of principled negotiation is
 - to separate the person from the problem,
 - to focus on interests and not on positions,
 - to invent options for mutual gain,
 - and to insist on objective criteria
- some external standard or principle that both parties can buy into.
- I suggest that they become involved in the following four-step process:
 - First, see the problem from the other point of view. Really seek to understand and give expression to the needs and concerns of the other party as well as or better than they can themselves.

- Second, identify the key issues and concerns (not positions) involved.
 - Third, determine what results would constitute a fully acceptable solution.
 - And fourth, identify possible new options to achieve those results.
- You can only achieve Win/Win solutions with Win/Win processes – the end and the means are the same.

4.3 Habit 5: Seek First to Understand, Then to Be Understood – Principles of Empathic Communication

We have such a tendency to rush in, to fix things up with good advice. But we often fail to take the time to diagnose, to really, deeply understand the problem first.

If I were to summarize in one sentence the single most important principle I have learned in the field of interpersonal relations, it would be this: Seek First to Understand, Then to Be Understood. This principle is the key to effective interpersonal communication.

4.3.1 Character and Communication

- Communication is the most important skill in life.
- But what about listening?
- If you want to interact effectively with me, to influence me – your spouse, your child, your neighbor, your boss, your coworker, your friend – you first need to understand me. And you can't do that with technique alone. If I sense you're using some technique, I sense duplicity, manipulation.
- The real key to your influence with me is your example, your actual conduct. Your example flows naturally out of your character, of the kind of person you truly are – not what others say you are or what you may want me to think you are.
- Your character is constantly radiating, communicating. From it, in the long run, I come to instinctively trust or distrust you and your efforts with me.
- But unless I open up with you, unless you understand me and my unique situation and feelings, you won't know how to advise or counsel me.
- Unless you're influenced by my uniqueness, I'm not going to be influenced by your advice. So if you want to be really effective in the habit of interpersonal communication, you cannot do it with technique alone. You have to build the skills of empathic listening on a base of character that inspires openness and trust. And you have to build the Emotional Bank Accounts that create a commerce between hearts.

4.3.2 Empathic Listening

- “Seek first to understand” involves a very deep shift in paradigm. We typically seek first to be understood.
- Most people do not listen with the intent to understand; they listen with the intent to reply.

They're either speaking or preparing to speak. They're filtering everything through their own paradigms, reading their autobiography into other people's lives.

- We're filled with our own rightness, our own autobiography. We want to be understood. Our conversations become collective monologues, and we never really understand what's going on inside another human being.
- When another person speaks, we're usually "listening" at one of four levels.
 - We may be ignoring another person, not really listening at all.
 - We may practice pretending.
 - We may practice selective listening, hearing only certain parts.
 - Or we may even practice attentive listening, paying attention and focusing energy on the words that are being said.

But very few of us ever practice the fifth level, the highest form of listening, empathic listening.

- When I say empathic listening, I am not referring to the techniques of "active" listening or "reflective" listening, which basically involve mimicking what another person says. That kind of listening is skill-based, truncated from character and relationship, and often insults those "listened" to in such a way.
- It is also essentially autobiographical. If you practice those techniques, you may not project your autobiography in the actual interaction, but your motive in listening is autobiographical.
- You listen with reflective skills, but you listen with intent to reply, to control, to manipulate.
- When I say empathic listening, I mean listening with intent to understand. I mean seeking first to understand, to really understand. It's an entirely different paradigm.
- Empathic (from empathy) listening gets inside another person's frame of reference.
- Empathy is not sympathy. Sympathy is a form of agreement, a form of judgment. It makes them dependent. The essence of empathic listening is not that you agree with someone; it's that you fully, deeply, understand that person, emotionally as well as intellectually.
- Empathic listening involves much more than registering, reflecting, or even understanding the words that are said.

Communications experts estimate, in fact, that only 10 percent of our communication is represented by the words we say. Another 30 percent is represented by our sounds, and 60 percent by our body language. In empathic listening, you listen with your ears, but you also, and more importantly, listen with your eyes and with your heart.

- Empathic listening is so powerful because it gives you accurate data to work with. You're dealing with the reality inside another person's head and heart. You're listening to understand. You're focused on receiving the deep communication of another human soul.
- In addition, empathic listening is the key to making deposits in Emotional Bank Accounts, because nothing you do is a deposit unless the other person perceives it as such.

It's deeply therapeutic and healing because it gives a person "psychological air".

- This is one of the greatest insights in the field of human motivations: Satisfied needs do not motivate. It's only the unsatisfied need that motivates. Next to physical survival, the greatest need of a human being is psychological survival – to be understood, to be affirmed, to be validated, to be appreciated.
- Seeking first to understand, diagnosing before you prescribe, is hard. It's so much easier in the short run to hand someone a pair of glasses that have fit you so well these many years.
- But in the long run, it severely depletes both P and PC. You can't achieve maximum interdependent production from an inaccurate understanding of where other people are coming from. And you can't have interpersonal PC – high Emotional Bank Accounts – if the people you relate with don't really feel understood.
- Empathic listening is also risky. It takes a great deal of security to go into a deep listening experience because you open yourself up to be influenced. You become vulnerable.

It's a paradox, in a sense, because in order to have influence, you have to be influenced.

4.3.3 Diagnose Before You Prescribe

- Although it's risky and hard, seek first to understand, or diagnose before you prescribe, is a correct principle manifesting many areas of life. It's the mark of all true professionals.
- If you don't have confidence in the diagnosis, you won't have confidence in the prescription.
- Diagnosing before you prescribe is also fundamental to law.
- Seek first to understand is a correct principle evident in all areas of life. It's a generic, common-denominator principle, but it has its greatest power in the area of interpersonal relations.

4.3.4 Four Autobiographical Responses

- Because we listen autobiographically, we tend to respond in one of four ways.
 - We evaluate – we either agree or disagree;
 - we probe – we ask questions from our own frame of reference;
 - we advise – we give counsel based on our own experience;
 - or we interpret – we try to figure people out, to explain their motives, their behavior, based on our own motives and behavior.

But how do they affect our ability to really understand?

- We are so deeply scripted in these responses that we don't even realize when we use them.
- To many, seek first to understand becomes the most exciting, the most immediately applicable, of all the Seven Habits.
- Can you see how limited we are when we try to understand another person on the basis of words alone, especially when we're looking at that person through our own glasses?

- You will never be able to truly step inside another person, to see the world as he sees it, until you develop the pure desire, the strength of personal character, and the positive Emotional Bank Account, as well as the empathic listening skills to do it.
- The skills, the tip of the iceberg of empathic listening, involve four developmental stages
 - The first and least effective is to mimic content. Mimicking content is easy. You just listen to the words that come out of someone's mouth and you repeat them. You're hardly even using your brain at all.
 - The second stage of empathic listening is to rephrase the content. It's a little more effective, but it's still limited to the verbal communication.
 - The third stage brings your right brain into operation. You reflect feeling.
 - The fourth stage includes both the second and the third. You rephrase the content and reflect the feeling.
- Now, what happens when you use fourth stage empathic listening skills is really incredible. As you authentically seek to understand, as you rephrase content and reflect feeling, you give him psychological air. You also help him work through his own thoughts and feelings. As he grows in his confidence of your sincere desire to really listen and understand, the barrier between what's going on inside him and what's actually being communicated to you disappears. It opens a soul-to-soul flow. He's not thinking and feeling one thing and communicating another. He begins to trust you with his innermost tender feelings and thoughts.
- And we'll never get to the problem if we're so caught up in our own autobiography, our own paradigms, that we don't take off our glasses long enough to see the world from another point of view.
- By seeking first to understand, this father has just turned a transactional opportunity into a transformational opportunity.
- As long as the response is logical, the father can effectively ask questions and give counsel. But the moment the response becomes emotional, he needs to go back to empathic listening.
- There are times when transformation requires no outside counsel. Often when people are really given the chance to open up, they unravel their own problems and the solutions become clear to them in the process.
- At other times, they really need additional perspective and help. The key is to genuinely seek the welfare of the individual, to listen with empathy, to let the person get to the problem and the solution at his own pace and time.
- In fact, sometimes words may just get in your way. That's one very important reason why technique alone will not work. That kind of understanding transcends technique. Isolated technique only gets in the way.
- The skills will not be effective unless they come from a sincere desire to understand. People resent any attempt to manipulate them.
- Affirming your motive is a huge deposit.
- But if you're not sincere, I wouldn't even try it. It may create an openness and a vulnerability that will later turn to your harm when a person discovers that you really didn't care, you really didn't want to listen, and he's left open, exposed, and hurt.

- Empathic listening takes time, but it doesn't take anywhere near as much time as it takes to back up and correct misunderstandings when you're already miles down the road, to redo, to live with unexpressed and unsolved problems, to deal with the results of not giving people psychological air.
- A discerning empathic listener can read what's happening down deep fast, and can show such acceptance, such understanding, that other people feel safe to open up layer after layer until they get to that soft inner core where the problem really lies.
- People want to be understood.

4.3.5 Understanding and Perception

- As you learn to listen deeply to other people, you will discover tremendous differences in perception. You will also begin to appreciate the impact that these differences can have as people try to work together in interdependent situations.
- Now, with all our differences, we're trying to work together – in a marriage, in a job, in a community service project – to manage resources and accomplish results.
- So how do we do it? The answer is Habit 5. It's the first step in the process of win-win. Even if (and especially when) the other person is not coming from that paradigm, seek first to understand.

4.3.6 Then Seek to Be Understood

- Seek First to Understand, Then to be Understood.
- Knowing how to be understood is the other half of Habit 5, and is equally critical in reaching win-win solutions.
- Seeking to understand requires consideration; seeking to be understood takes courage. Win/win requires a high degree of both.
- - Ethos is your personal credibility, the faith people have in your integrity and competency. It's the trust that you inspire, your Emotional Bank Account.
 - Pathos is the empathic side – it's the feeling. It means that you are in alignment with the emotional trust of another person's communication.
 - Logos is the logic, the reasoning part of the presentation.
- Notice the sequence: ethos, pathos, logos – your character, and your relationships, and then the logic of your presentation.
- When you can present your own ideas clearly, specifically, visually, and most important, contextually – in the context of a deep understanding of their paradigms and concerns – you significantly increase the credibility of your ideas.

4.3.7 One on One

- Habit 5 is powerful because it is right in the middle of your Circle of Influence. Many factors in interdependent situations are in your Circle of Concern – problems, disagreements, circumstances, other people’s behavior.
- But you can always seek first to understand. That’s something that’s within your control.

And as you do that, as you focus on your Circle of Influence, you really, deeply understand other people. You have accurate information to work with, you get to the heart of matters quickly, you build Emotional Bank Accounts, and you give people the psychological air they need so you can work together effectively.

- It’s the Inside-Out approach. Because you really listen, you become influenceable. And being influenceable is the key to influencing others. Your circle begins to expand. You increase your ability to influence many of the things in your Circle of Concern.
- The next time you communicate with anyone, you can put aside your own autobiography and genuinely seek to understand. Even when people don’t want to open up about their problems, you can be empathic.
- You can sense their hearts, you can sense the hurt, and you can respond, “You seem down today.” They may say nothing. That’s all right. You’ve shown understanding and respect.
- Don’t push; be patient; be respectful. People don’t have to open up verbally before you can empathize. You can empathize all the time with their behavior. You can be discerning, sensitive, and aware and you can live outside your autobiography when that is needed.
- We often share our different perceptions of the situation, and we role-play more effective approaches to difficult interpersonal family problems.
- The time you invest to deeply understand the people you love brings tremendous dividends in open communication.
- Seek first to understand. Before the problems come up, before you try to evaluate and prescribe, before you try to present your own ideas – seek to understand. It’s a powerful habit of effective interdependence.

4.4 Habit 6: Synergize – Principles of Creative Cooperation

When properly understood, synergy is the highest activity in all life – the true test and manifestation of all the other habits put together.

The highest forms of synergy focus

- the four unique human endowments,
- the motive of win-win,
- and the skills of empathic communication on the toughest challenges we face in life. What results is almost miraculous. We create new alternatives – something that wasn’t there before.

Synergy is the essence of Principle-Centered Leadership. It is the essence of principle-centered parenting. It catalyzes, unifies, and unleashes the greatest powers within people. All the habits we have covered prepare us to create the miracle of synergy.

What is synergy? Simply defined, it means that the whole is greater than the sum of its parts. It means that the relationship which the parts have to each other is a part in and of itself. It is not only a part, but the most catalytic, the most empowering, the most unifying, and the most exciting part.

Synergy is everywhere in nature. The whole is greater than the sum of its parts. One plus one equals three or more.

Family life provides many opportunities to observe synergy and to practice it.

The essence of synergy is to value differences – to respect them, to build on strengths, to compensate for weaknesses.

4.4.1 Synergistic Communication

- When you communicate synergistically, you are simply opening your mind and heart and expressions to new possibilities, new alternatives, new options.

You're not sure when you engage in synergistic communication how things will work out or what the end will look like, but you do have an inward sense of excitement and security and adventure, believing that it will be significantly better than it was before. And that is the end that you have in mind.

- Many people have not really experienced even a moderate degree of synergy in their family life or in other interactions. They've been trained and scripted into defensive and protective communications or into believing that life or other people can't be trusted. As a result, they are never really open to Habit 6 and to these principles.

This represents one of the great tragedies and wastes in life, because so much potential remains untapped – completely undeveloped and unused.

- These things can be produced regularly, consistently, almost daily in people's lives. But it requires enormous personal security and openness and a spirit of adventure.
- Almost all creative endeavors are somewhat unpredictable. They often seem ambiguous, hit-or-miss, trial and error.

4.4.2 Synergy in Classroom

- There are times when neither the teacher nor the student know for sure what's going to happen. In the beginning, there's a safe environment that enables people to be really open and to learn and to listen to each other's ideas. Then comes brainstorming where the spirit of evaluation is subordinated to the spirit of creativity, imagining, and intellectual networking. Then an absolutely unusual phenomenon begins to take place. The entire class is transformed with the excitement of a new thrust, a new idea, a new direction that's hard to define, yet it's almost palpable to the people involved.
- Synergy is almost as if a group collectively agrees to subordinate old scripts and to write a new one.

4.4.3 Synergy in Business

- The synergistic process that led to the creation of our mission statement engraved it in all the hearts and minds of everyone there, and it has served us well as a frame of reference of what we are about, as well as what we are not about.
- Once people have experienced real synergy, they are never quite the same again. They know the possibility of having other such mind-expanding adventures in the future.
- Often attempts are made to recreate a particular synergistic experience, but this seldom can be done. However, the essential purpose behind creative work can be recaptured. We seek not to imitate past creative synergistic experiences, rather we seek new ones around new and different and sometimes higher purposes.

4.4.4 Synergy and Communication

- Synergy is exciting. Creativity is exciting. It's phenomenal what openness and communication can produce. The possibilities of truly significant gain, of significant improvement are so real that it's worth the risk such openness entails.
- The following diagram illustrates how closely trust is related to different levels of communication.
 - The lowest level of communication coming out of low-trust situations would be characterized by defensiveness, protectiveness, and often legalistic language, which covers all the bases and spells out qualifiers and the escape clauses in the event things go sour.

Such communication produces only win/lose or lose/lose. It isn't effective – there's no P/PC Balance – and it creates further reasons to defend and protect.
 - The middle position is respectful communication. This is the level where fairly mature people interact. They have respect for each other, but they want to avoid the possibility of ugly confrontations, so they communicate politely but not empathically.

Respectful communication works in independent situations and even in interdependent situations, but the creative possibilities are not opened up.
 - Synergy means that $1 + 1$ may equal 8, 16, or even 1,600. The synergistic position of high trust produces solutions better than any originally proposed, and all parties know it.

4.4.5 Fishing for the Third Alternative

- Whatever compromise they finally agree on, it could be rehearsed over the years as evidence of insensitivity, neglect, or a bad priority decision on either part. It could be a source of contention for years and could even polarize the family.

Many marriages that once were beautiful and soft and spontaneous and loving have deteriorated to the level of a hostility through a series of incidents just like this.
- Because they have a high Emotional Bank Account, they have trust and open communication in their marriage. Because they Think Win/Win, they believe in a Third Alternative, a solution that is mutually beneficial and is better than what either of them originally proposed.

Because they listen empathically and seek first to understand, they create within themselves and between them a comprehensive picture of the values and the concerns that need to be taken into account in making a decision.

4.4.6 Negative Synergy

- Seeking the Third Alternative is a major Paradigm Shift from the dichotomous, either/or mentality. But look at the difference in results.
- The problem is that highly dependent people are trying to succeed in an interdependent reality. They're either dependent on borrowing strength from position power and they go for win/lose or they're dependent on being popular with others and they go for lose/win. They may talk win/win technique, but they don't really want to listen; they want to manipulate. And synergy can't thrive in that environment.

4.4.7 Valuing the Differences

- Valuing the differences is the essence of synergy – the mental, the emotional, the psychological differences between people. And the key to valuing those differences is to realize that all people see the world, not as it is, but as they are.
- The person who is truly effective has the humility and reverence to recognize his own perceptual limitations and to appreciate the rich resources available through interaction with the hearts and minds of other human beings. That person values the differences because those differences add to his knowledge, to his understanding of reality. When we're left to our own experiences, we constantly suffer from a shortage of data.
- And unless we value the differences in our perceptions, unless we value each other and give credence to the possibility that we're both right, that life is not always a dichotomous either/or, that there are almost always Third Alternatives, we will never be able to transcend the limits of that conditioning.

4.4.8 All Nature is Synergistic

- Ecology is a word which basically describes the synergism in nature – everything is related to everything else. It's in the relationship that creative powers are maximized, just as the real power in these Seven Habits is in their relationship to each other, not just in the individual habits themselves.
- The relationship of the parts is also the power in creating a synergistic culture inside a family or an organization.
- Synergy works; it's a correct principle.
- Although you cannot control the paradigms of others in an interdependent interaction or the synergistic process itself, a great deal of synergy is within your Circle of Influence.
- Your own internal synergy is completely within the circle. You can respect both sides of your own nature – the analytical side and the creative side. You can value the difference between them and use that difference to catalyze creativity.
- You can exercise the courage in interdependent situations to be open, to express your ideas, your feelings, and your experiences in a way that will encourage other people to be open also.

5 Renewal

5.1 Habit 7: Sharpen the Saw – Principles of Balanced Self-Renewal

5.1.1 Four Dimensions of Renewal

- Habit 7 is personal PC. It's preserving and enhancing the greatest asset you have – you. It's renewing the four dimensions of your nature – physical, spiritual, mental, and social/emotional.
- “Sharpen the Saw” basically means expressing all four motivations. It means exercising all four dimensions of our nature, regularly and consistently, in wise and balanced ways.
- To do this, we must be proactive. Taking time to sharpen the saw is a definite Quadrant II activity, and Quadrant II must be acted on. Quadrant I, because of its urgency, acts on us; it presses upon us constantly. Personal PC must be pressed upon until it becomes second nature, until it becomes a kind of healthy addiction. Because it's at the center of our Circle of Influence, no one else can do it for us. We must do it for ourselves.
- This is the single most powerful investment we can ever make in life – investment in ourselves, in the only instrument we have with which to deal with life and to contribute.

5.1.2 The Physical Dimension

- The physical dimension involves caring effectively for our physical body – eating the right kinds of foods, getting sufficient rest and relaxation, and exercising on a regular basis.
- Exercise is one of those Quadrant II, high-leverage activities that most of us don't do consistently because it isn't urgent.
- A good exercise program is one that you can do in your own home and one that will build your body in three areas: endurance, flexibility, and strength.
 - Endurance comes from aerobic exercise, from cardiovascular efficiency – the ability of your heart to pump blood through your body.
 - Flexibility comes through stretching. Most experts recommend warming up before and cooling down/stretching after aerobic exercise. Before, it helps loosen and warm the muscles to prepare for more vigorous exercise.
 - Strength comes from muscle resistance exercises – like simple calisthenics, push-ups, and sit-ups, and from working with weights.
- The essence of renewing the physical dimension is to sharpen the saw, to exercise our bodies on a regular basis in a way that will preserve and enhance our capacity to work and adapt and enjoy.

5.1.3 The Spiritual Dimension

- Renewing the spiritual dimension provides leadership to your life. It's highly related to Habit 2.

- The spiritual dimension is your core, your center, your commitment to your value system. It's a very private area of life and a supremely important one. It draws upon the sources that inspire and uplift you and tie you to the timeless truths of all humanity. And people do it very, very differently.
- I find renewal in daily prayerful meditation on the scriptures because they represent my value system. As I read and meditate, I feel renewed, strengthened, centered, and recommitted to serve.
- Spiritual renewal takes an investment of time. But it's a Quadrant II activity we don't really have time to neglect.
- The idea is that when we take time to draw on the leadership center of our lives, what life is ultimately all about, it spreads like an umbrella over everything else. It renews us, it refreshes us, particularly if we recommit to it.

5.1.4 The Mental Dimension

- Most of our mental development and study discipline comes through formal education. But as soon as we leave the external discipline of school, many of us let our minds atrophy.
- Wisdom in watching television requires the effective self-management of Habit 3, which enables you to discriminate and to select the informing, inspiring, and entertaining programs which best serve and express your purpose and values.
- Education – continuing education, continually honing and expanding the mind – is vital mental renewal. Sometimes that involves the external discipline of the classroom or systematized study programs; more often it does not. Proactive people can figure out many, many ways to educate themselves.
- It is extremely valuable to train the mind to stand apart and examine its own program. Training, without such education, narrows and closes the mind so that the assumptions underlying the training are never examined. That's why it is so valuable to read broadly and to expose yourself to great minds.
- There's no better way to inform and expand your mind on a regular basis than to get into the habit of reading good literature. That's another high-leverage Quadrant II activity. You can get into the best minds that are now or that have ever been in the world. I highly recommend starting with a goal of a book a month then a book every two weeks, then a book a week. "The person who doesn't read is no better off than the person who can't read."
- Writing is another powerful way to sharpen the mental saw. Keeping a journal of our thoughts, experiences, insights, and learnings promotes mental clarity, exactness, and context. Writing good letters – communicating on the deeper level of thoughts, feelings, and ideas rather than on the shallow, superficial level of events – also affects our ability to think clearly, to reason accurately, and to be understood effectively.
- Organizing and planning represent other forms of mental renewal associated with Habits 2 and 3. It's beginning with the end in mind and being able mentally to organize to accomplish that end. It's exercising the visualizing, imagining power of your mind to see the end from the beginning and to see the entire journey, at least in principles, if not in steps.
- There's no other way you could spend an hour that would begin to compare with the Daily

Private Victory in terms of value and results. It will affect every decision, every relationship. It will greatly improve the quality, the effectiveness, of every other hour of the day, including the depth and restfulness of your sleep. It will build the long-term physical, spiritual, and mental strength to enable you to handle difficult challenges in life.

5.1.5 The Social/Emotional Dimension

- While the physical, spiritual, and mental dimensions are closely related to Habits 1, 2, and 3 – centered on the principles of personal vision, leadership, and management – the social/emotional dimension focuses on Habits 4, 5, and 6 – centered on the principles of interpersonal leadership, empathic communication, and creative cooperation.
- The social and the emotional dimensions of our lives are tied together because our emotional life is primarily, but not exclusively, developed out of and manifested in our relationships with others.
- Renewing our social/emotional dimension does not take time in the same sense that renewing the other dimensions does. We can do it in our normal everyday interactions with other people. But it definitely requires exercise.
- But we see things differently; we’re looking through different glasses.
- If our personal security comes from sources within ourselves, then we have the strength to practice the habits of Public Victory. If we are emotionally insecure, even though we may be intellectually very advanced, practicing Habits 4, 5, and 6 with people who think differently on jugular issues of life can be terribly threatening.
- Where does intrinsic security come from? It doesn’t come from the scripts they’ve handed us. It doesn’t come from our circumstances or our position.
- It comes from within. It comes from accurate paradigms and correct principles deep in our own mind and heart. It comes from Inside-Out congruence, from living a life of integrity in which our daily habits reflect our deepest values.
- Peace of mind comes when your life is in harmony with true principles and values and in no other way.
- There is also the intrinsic security that comes as a result of effective interdependent living. There is security in knowing that win/win solutions do exist, that life is not always “either/or,” that there are almost always mutually beneficial Third Alternatives.
- There is intrinsic security that comes from service, from helping other people in a meaningful way. One important source is your work, when you see yourself in a contributive and creative mode, really making a difference.

5.1.6 Scripting Others

- Most people are a function of the social mirror, scripted by the opinions, the perceptions, the paradigms of the people around them. As interdependent people, you and I come from a paradigm which includes the realization that we are a part of that social mirror.
- We can choose to reflect back to others a clear, undistorted vision of themselves. We can affirm their proactive nature and treat them as responsible people. We can help script them as principle-centered, value-based, independent, worthwhile individuals. And, with the Abundance Mentality, we realize that giving a positive reflection to others in no way diminishes us. It increases us because it increases the opportunities for effective interaction with other proactive people.

- At some time in your life, you probably had someone believe in you when you didn't believe in yourself. He or she scripted you. Did that make a difference in your life.
- What if you were a positive scripter, an affirmer, of other people? When they're being directed by the social mirror to take the lower path, you inspire them toward a higher path because you believe in them. You listen to them and empathize with them. You don't absolve them of responsibility; you encourage them to be proactive.
- We can refuse to label them – we can "see" them in new fresh ways each time we're with them. We can help them become independent, fulfilled people capable of deeply satisfying, enriching, and productive relationships with others.

5.1.7 Balance in Renewal

- The self-renewal process must include balanced renewal in all four dimensions of our nature: the physical, the spiritual, the mental, and the social/emotional.
- Although renewal in each dimension is important, it only becomes optimally effective as we deal with all four dimensions in a wise and balanced way. To neglect any one area negatively impacts the rest.
- I have found this to be true in organizations as well as in individual lives.

5.1.8 Synergy in Renewal

- Balanced renewal is optimally synergetic. The things you do to sharpen the saw in any one dimension have positive impact in other dimensions because they are so highly interrelated.

Your physical health affects your mental health; your spiritual strength affects your social/emotional strength. As you improve in one dimension, you increase your ability in other dimensions as well.

- The more proactive you are (Habit 1), the more effectively you can exercise personal leadership (Habit 2) and management (Habit 3) in your life. The more effectively you manage your life (Habit 3), the more Quadrant II renewing activities you can do (Habit 7). The more you seek first to understand (Habit 5), the more effectively you can go for synergetic win-win solutions (Habits 4 and 6). The more you improve in any of the habits that lead to independence (Habits 1, 2, and 3), the more effective you will be in interdependent situations (Habits 4, 5, and 6). And renewal (Habit 7) is the process of renewing all the habits.
- *The Daily Private Victory – a minimum of one hour a day in renewal of the physical, spiritual, and mental dimensions – is the key to the development of the Seven Habits and it's completely within your Circle of Influence. It is the Quadrant II focus time necessary to integrate these habits into your life, to become principle-centered.
- It's also the foundation for the Daily Public Victory. It's the source of intrinsic security you need to sharpen the saw in the social/emotional dimension.

5.1.9 The Upward Spiral

- Renewal is the principle – and the process – that empowers us to move on an upward spiral of growth and change, of continuous improvement.
- Conscience is the endowment that senses our congruence or disparity with correct principles and lifts us toward them – when it’s in shape.
- Education of the conscience is vital to the truly proactive, highly effective person. Training and educating the conscience, however, requires even greater concentration, more balanced discipline, more consistently honest living. It requires regular feasting on inspiring literature, thinking noble thoughts and, above all, living in harmony with its still small voice.
- And there is no shortcut in developing them. The Law of the Harvest governs; we will always reap what we sow – no more, no less.
- We must show diligence in the process of renewal by educating and obeying our conscience.
- Moving along the upward spiral requires us to learn, commit, and do on increasingly higher planes. We deceive ourselves if we think that any one of these is sufficient. To keep progressing, we must learn, commit, and do – learn, commit, and do – and learn, commit, and do again.

5.2 Inside-Out Again

5.2.1 Intergenerational Living

- There is transcendent power in a strong intergenerational family. An effectively interdependent family of children, parents, grandparents, aunts, uncles, and cousins can be a powerful force in helping people have a sense of who they are and where they came from and what they stand for.

5.2.2 Becoming a Transition Person

- Among other things, I believe that giving “wings” to our children and to others means empowering them with the freedom to rise above negative scripting that had been passed down to us.
- Instead of transferring those scripts to the next generation, we can change them. And we can do it in a way that will build relationships in the process
- A tendency that’s run through your family for generations can stop with you. You’re a transition person – a link between the past and the future. And your own change can affect many, many lives downstream.
