1 Learning Summary

1.1 Principle-Centered Paradigm

1.2 From Independence to Interdependence

1.3 Seven Habits and Seven Principles

1.4 Balanced Self-Renewal

1.5 Become a Transition Person

2 Paradigms and Principles

2.1 Inside-Out

If we wanted to change the situation, we first had to change ourselves. And to change ourselves effectively, we first had to change our perceptions.

2.1.1 Personality and Character Ethics

- The elements of Personality Ethic are sometimes essential for success.
 - personality growth
 - communication skills
 - education in the field of influence strategies
 - positive thinking

2.1.2 Primary and Secondary Greatness

- The elements of Personality Ethic are secondary, not primary traits. If my character is fundamentally flawed, marked by duplicity and insincerity, then, in the long run, I cannot be successful – My duplicity will breed distrust, and everything i do – even using so-called good human relations techniques – will be preceived as manipulative.
- In one-shot or short-term human interactions, you can use Personality Ethics to win over good impressions through charm and skill.
- If there is little or no trust, there is no foundation for permanent success. Only basic goodness gives life to techinque.
- You always reap what you sow; there is no shortcut.
- If there isn't deep integrity and fundamental character strength, the challenges of life will cause true motives to surface and human relationship failure will replace short-term success.
- Many people with secondary greatness – that is, social recognition for their talents – lack primary greatness or goodness in their character.

2.1.3 The Power of A Paradigm

- The Seven Habits of Highly Effective People embody many of the fundamental principles of human effectiveness. These habits are basic; they are primary. They represent the internalization of correct principles upon which enduring happiness and success are based.
- The word paradigm is more commonly used today to mean a model, theory, perception, assumption, or frame of reference. In a more general sense, it means the way we see the world in terms of preceiving, understanding, interpreting.
- A simple way to understand paradigms is to see them as maps. Maps is not the territory. A map is simply an explanation of certain aspects of the territory. It is a theory, an explanation, or model of something else.
- Each of us has many, many maps in our head, which can be divided into two main categories:
 - maps of the way things are, or realities,
 - and maps of the way things should be, or values.
- We seldom question their accuracy; we're usually even unaware that we have them. We simply assume that the way we see things is the way they really are or the way they should be.
- And our attitudes and behaviors grow out of those assumptions. The way we see things is the source of the way we think and the way we act.
- The fundamental problem has nothing to do with your behavior or your attitude. It has everything to do with having a wrong map.
- The paradigms are the source of our attitudes and behaviors. And conditioning effects impact our perceptions and paradigms.
- The basic flaws of the personality ethic is oo try to change outward attitudes and behaviors does very little good in the long run if we fail to examine the basic paradigms from which those attitudes and behaviors flow.

2.1.4 The Power of A Paradigm Shift

- Paradigm Shift: almost every significant breakthrough in the field of scientific endeavor is first a break with tradition, with old ways of thinking, with old paradigms.
- Not all Paradigm Shifts are in positive directions. As we have observed, the shift from the character ethic to the personality ethic has drawn us away from the very roots that nourish true success and happiness.
- But whether they shift us in positive or negative directions, paradigm shift create powerful change. Our paradigms, correct or incorrect, are the sources of our attitudes and behaviors, and ultimately our relationships with others.
- Many people experience a similar fundamental shift in thinking when they face a life-threatening crisis and suddenly see their priorities in a different light, or when they suddenly step into a new role, such as that of husband or wife, parent or grandparent, manager or leader.

2.1.5 Seeing and Being

- Not all Paradigm Shifts are instantaneous. The power of a Paradigm Shift is the essential power of quantum change, whether that shift is an instantaneous or a slow and deliberate process
- Our Paradigms are the way we “see” the world or circumstances – not in terms of our visual sense of sight, but in terms of perceiving, understanding, and interpreting.
- Paradigms are inseparable from character. Being is seeing in the human dimension.

2.1.6 The Principle-Centered Paradigm

- The Character Ethic is based on the fundamental idea that there are principles that govern human effectiveness – natural laws in the human dimension that are just as real, just as unchanging and unarguably “there” as laws such as gravity are in the physical dimension.
- Principles are like lighthouses. They are natural laws that cannot be broken.
- Principles are not values. Principles are the territory. Values are maps. When we value correct principles, we have truth – a knowledge of things as they are.
- Principles are guidelines for human conduct that are proven to have enduring, permanent value. They’re fundamental. They’re essentially unarguable because they are self-evident.
- The more closely our maps or paradigms are aligned with these principles or natural laws, the more accurate and functional they will be. Correct maps will infinitely impact our personal and interpersonal effectiveness far more than any amount of effort expended on changing our attitudes and behaviors

2.1.7 Principles of Growth and Change

- In all of life, there are sequential stages of growth and development. Each step is important and each one takes time. No step can be skipped.
- This is true in all phases of life, in all areas of development.

2.1.8 The Way we See the Problem Is the Problem

- The way we see the problem is the problem.
- Can you see how fundamentally the paradigms of the personality ethic affect the very way we see our problems as well as the way we attempt to solve them?

2.1.9 A New Level of Thinking

- This new level of thinking is what Seven Habits of Highly Effective People is about.
- It’s a principle-centered, character-based, “Inside-Out” approach to personal and interpersonal effectiveness.
- “Inside-Out” means to start first with self; even more fundamentally, to start with the most inside part of self – with your paradigms, your character, and your motives.

- The Inside-Out approach says that Private Victories precede Public Victories, that making and keeping promises to ourselves precedes making and keeping promises to others.
- Inside-Out is a process – a continuing process of renewal based on the natural laws that govern human growth and progress. It’s an upward spiral of growth that leads to progressively higher forms of responsible independence and effective interdependence.

2.2 The Seven Habits – An Overview

2.2.1 “Habits” Defined

- For our purposes, we will define a habit as the intersection of knowledge, skill, and desire.
 - Knowledge is the theoretical paradigm, the what to do and the why.
 - Skill is the how to do.
 - And desire is the motivation, the want to do.

In order to make something a habit in our lives, we have to have all three.

2.2.2 The Maturity Continuum

- Our growth from infancy to adulthood is in accordance with natural law. And there are many dimensions to growth. Reaching our full physical maturity, for example, does not necessarily assure us of simultaneous emotional or mental maturity. On the other hand, a person’s physical dependence does not mean that he or she is mentally or emotionally immature.
- On the maturity continuum,
 - dependence is the paradigm of you – you take care of me; you come through for me; you didn’t come through; I blame you for the results.
 - Independence is the paradigm of I – I can do it; I am responsible; I am self-reliant; I can choose.
 - Interdependence is the paradigm of we – we can do it: we can cooperate; we can combine our talents and abilities and create something greater together.
- Dependent people need others to get what they want. Independent people can get what they want through their own effort. Interdependent people combine their own efforts with the efforts of others to achieve their greatest success.
- If I were independent, physically, I could pretty well make it on my own.
Mentally, I could think my own thoughts, I could move from one level of abstraction to another. I could think creatively and analytically and organize and express my thoughts in understandable ways.
Emotionally, I would be validated from within. I would be inner directed. My sense of worth would not be a function of being liked or treated well.
- True independence of character empowers us to act rather than be acted upon.
- Independence is a major achievement in and of itself. But independence is not supreme.

- Independent thinking alone is not suited to interdependent reality. Independent people who do not have the maturity to think and act interdependently may be good individual producers, but they won't be good leaders or team players. They're not coming from the paradigm of interdependence necessary to succeed in marriage, family, or organizational reality.
- Life is, by nature, highly interdependent.
- Interdependence is a far more mature, more advanced concept.

If I am physically interdependent, I am self-reliant and capable, but I also realize that you and I working together can accomplish far more than, even at my best, I could accomplish alone.

If I am emotionally interdependent, I derive a great sense of worth within myself, but I also recognize the need for love, for giving, and for receiving love from others.

If I am intellectually interdependent, I realize that I need the best thinking of other people to join with my own.
- Interdependence is a choice only independent people can make. Dependent people cannot choose to become interdependent. They don't have the character to do it; they don't own enough of themselves.

2.2.3 Effectiveness Defined

- A paradigm of effectiveness that is in harmony with a natural law, a principle I call the "P/PC Balance."
 - P stands for Production,
 - and PC stands for Production Capacity.
- True effectiveness is a function of two things:
 - what is produced (the production)
 - and the producing asset or capacity to produce (the production capacity)
- Effectiveness lies in the balance. Focusing only on production will leave no assets to produce; focusing only on production capacity will fail to produce enough to maintain yourself or the capacity.

2.2.4 Three Kinds of Assets

- Basically, there are three kinds of assets: physical, financial, and human.
 - physical assets: house, car, personal belongings, our body or our environment.
 - financial assets: income, job, experience, skills, education, our capacity to earn,
 - human assets: trust, responsibility, marriage, child-parent, other human relationships,
- In the human area, the P/PC Balance is equally fundamental, but even more important, because people control physical and financial assets.

- Examples in marriage, in child education.

2.2.5 Organizational PC

- One of the immensely valuable aspects of any correct principle is that it is valid and applicable in a wide variety of circumstances.
- When people fail to respect the P/PC Balance in their use of physical assets in organizations, they decrease organizational effectiveness and often leave others with dying geese.
- The P/PC Balance is particularly important as it applies to the human assets of an organization – the customers and the employees.
- There are organizations that talk a lot about the customer and then completely neglect the people that deal with the customer – the employees. The PC principle is to always treat your employees exactly as you want them to treat your best customers.
- Effectiveness lies in the balance.

Excessive focus on P results in ruined health, worn-out machines, depleted bank accounts, and broken relationships.

Too much focus on PC is like a person who runs for three or four hours a day, bragging about the extra 10 years of life it creates, unaware he's spending them running. Or a person endlessly going to school, never producing, living on other people's golden eggs – the eternal student syndrome.

- To maintain the P/PC Balance is often a difficult judgment call. But I suggest it is the very essence of effectiveness. It balances short term with long term.
- The P/PC Balance is the very essence of effectiveness. It's validated in every arena of life.

2.2.6 How to Use This Book and What You Can Expect

- Before we begin work on the Seven Habits of Highly Effective People, I would like to suggest two Paradigm Shifts that will greatly increase the value you will receive from this material:
 - First, I would recommend that you not “see” this material as a book. You may choose to read it completely through once for a sense of the whole. But the material is designed to be a companion in the continual process of change and growth. It is organized incrementally and with suggestions for application at the end of each habit so that you can study and focus on any particular habit as you are ready.

As you progress to deeper levels of understanding and implementation, you can go back time and again to the principles contained in each habit and work to expand your knowledge, skill, and desire.

 - Second, I would suggest that you shift your paradigm of your own involvement in this material from the role of learner to that of teacher. Take an Inside-Out approach, and read with the purpose in mind of sharing or discussing what you learn with someone else within 48 hours after you learn it.
- If you decide to open your “gate of change” to really understand and live the principles embodied in the Seven Habits, I feel comfortable in assuring you several positive things will happen.

- First, your growth will be evolutionary, but the net effect will be revolutionary.

The net effect of opening the "gate of change" to the first three habits – the habits of Private Victory – will be significantly increased self-confidence.

As you live your values, your sense of identity, integrity, control, and inner-directedness will infuse you with both exhilaration and peace. You will define yourself from within, rather than by people's opinions or by comparisons to others. "Wrong" and "right" will have little to do with being found out.

Ironically, you'll find that as you care less about what others think of you; you will care more about what others think of themselves and their worlds, including their relationship with you. You'll no longer build your emotional life on other people's weaknesses. In addition, you'll find it easier and more desirable to change because there is something – some core deep within – that is essentially changeless.

- As you open yourself to the next three habits – the habits of Public Victory – you will discover and unleash both the desire and the resources to heal and rebuild important relationships that have deteriorated, or even broken. Good relationships will improve – become deeper, more solid, more creative, and more adventuresome.
- The seventh habit, if deeply internalized, will renew the first six and will make you truly independent and capable of effective interdependence. Through it, you can charge your own batteries.

3 Private Victory

3.1 Habit 1: Be Proactive – Principles of Personal Vision

Self-awareness enables us to stand apart and examine even the way we "see" ourselves – our paradigm, the most fundamental paradigm of effectiveness. It affects not only our attitudes and behaviors, but also how we see other people. It becomes our map of the basic nature of mankind.

3.1.1 The Social Mirror

- If the only vision we have of ourselves comes from the social mirror – from the current social paradigm and from the opinions, perceptions, and paradigms of the people around us – our view of ourselves is like the reflection in the crazy mirror room at the carnival.
- These visions are disjointed and out of proportion. They are often more projections than reflections, projecting the concerns and character weaknesses of people giving the input rather than accurately reflecting what we are.
- While we have acknowledged the tremendous power of conditioning in our lives, to say that we are determined by it, that we have no control over that influence, creates quite a different map.

3.1.2 Between Stimulus and Response

- The deterministic paradigm comes primarily from the study of animals. Our unique human endowments lift us above the animal world. The extent to which we exercise and develop these endowments empowers us to fulfill our uniquely human potential. Between stimulus and response is our greatest power – the freedom to choose.

3.1.3 “Proactivity” Defined

- In discovering the basic principle of the nature of man, Frankl described an accurate self-map from which he began to develop the first and most basic habit of a highly effective person in any environment, the habit of Proactivity.
- Proactivity means more than merely taking initiative. It means that as human beings, we are responsible for our own lives. Our behavior is a function of our decisions, not our conditions. We can subordinate feelings to values. We have the initiative and the responsibility to make things happen.
- Highly proactive people recognize that responsibility. They do not blame circumstances, conditions, or conditioning for their behavior. Their behavior is a product of their own conscious choice, based on values, rather than a product of their conditions, based on feeling.
- Because we are, by nature, proactive, if our lives are a function of conditioning and conditions, it is because we have, by conscious decision or by default, chosen to empower those things to control us.
- In making such a choice, we become reactive.

Reactive people are often affected by their physical environment.

Reactive people are also affected by their social environment, by the “social weather.” Reactive people build their emotional lives around the behavior of others, empowering the weaknesses of other people to control them.

- The ability to subordinate an impulse to a value is the essence of the proactive person. Reactive people are driven by feelings, by circumstances, by conditions, by their environment. Proactive people are driven by values – carefully thought about, selected and internalized values.

I admit this is very hard to accept emotionally, especially if we have had years and years of explaining our misery in the name of circumstance or someone else’s behavior. But until a person can say deeply and honestly, “I am what I am today because of the choices I made yesterday,” that person cannot say, “I choose otherwise.”

- Our character, our basic identity, does not have to be hurt at all. In fact, our most difficult experiences become the crucibles that forge our character and develop *the internal powers, the freedom to handle difficult circumstances in the future and to inspire others to do so as well.
- Viktor Frankl suggests that there are three central values in life –
 - the experiential, or that which happens to us;
 - the creative, or that which we bring into existence;

- and the attitudinal, or our response in difficult circumstances such as terminal illness

What matters most is how we respond to what we experience in life.

- Difficult circumstances often create Paradigm Shifts, whole new frames of reference by which people see the world and themselves and others in it, and what life is asking of them. Their larger perspective reflects the attitudinal values that lift and inspire us all.

3.1.4 Taking the Initiative

- Our basic nature is to act, and not be acted upon. As well as enabling us to choose our response to particular circumstances, this empowers us to create circumstances.
- Taking initiative does not mean being pushy, obnoxious, or aggressive. It does mean recognizing our responsibility to make things happen.
- Many people wait for something to happen or someone to take care of them. But people who end up with the good jobs are the proactive ones who are solutions to problems, not problems themselves, who seize the initiative to do whatever is necessary, consistent with correct principles, to get the job done.
- Holding people to the responsible course is not demeaning; it is affirming. By respecting the proactive nature of other people, we provide them with at least one clear, undistorted reflection from the social mirror.

3.1.5 Act or Be Acted Upon

- It takes initiative to create the P/PC Balance of effectiveness in your life. It takes initiative to develop the Seven Habits. As you study the other six habits, you will see that each depends on the development of your proactive muscles. Each puts the responsibility on you to act.

If you wait to be acted upon, you will be acted upon. And growth and opportunity consequences attend either road.

- “What is our response? What are we going to do? How can we exercise initiative in this situation?”
- The difference between positive thinking and proactivity: Proactivity did face reality. We faced the reality of the current circumstance and of future projections. But we also faced the reality that we had the power to choose a positive response to those circumstances and projections. Not facing reality would have been to accept the idea that what’s happening in our environment had to determine us.

3.1.6 Listening to Our Language

- Because our attitudes and behaviors flow out of our paradigms, if we use our self-awareness to examine them, we can often see in them the nature of our underlying maps. Our language, for example, is a very real indicator of the degree to which we see ourselves as proactive people.
- The language of reactive people absolves them of responsibility. That language comes from a basic paradigm of determinism. And the whole spirit of it is the transfer of responsibility.
- A serious problem with reactive language is that it becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy. People become reinforced in the paradigm that they are determined, and they produce evidence to support the belief. They feel increasingly victimized and out of control, not in charge of their life or their destiny. They blame outside forces – other people, circumstances, even the stars – for their own situation.

- Proactive people subordinate feelings to values. Love, the feeling, can be recaptured.

3.1.7 Circle of Concern or Circle of Influence

- Another excellent way to become more self-aware regarding our own degree of proactivity is to look at where we focus our time and energy.
 - Circle of Concern: a wide range of concerns; separate from things in which we have no particular mental or emotional involvement.
 - Circle of Influence: within the Circle of Concerns, there are things that we have real control.

Within the Circle of Concerns but outside Circle of Influence, there are some things over which we have no real control and others that we can do something about.

- By determining which of these two circles is the focus of most of our time and energy, we can discover much about the degree of our proactivity.
 - Proactive people focus their efforts in the Circle of Influence.
 - Reactive people, on the other hand, focus their efforts in the Circle of Concern. They focus on the weakness of other people, the problems in the environment, and circumstances over which they have no control.

The negative energy generated by that focus, combined with neglect in areas they could do something about, causes their Circle of Influence to shrink.

- As long as we are working in our Circle of Concern, we empower the things within it to control us. We aren't taking the proactive initiative necessary to effect positive change.
- It was only when we went to work in our Circle of Influence, when we focused on our own paradigms, that we began to create a positive energy that changed ourselves and eventually influenced our son as well. By working on ourselves instead of worrying about conditions, we were able to influence the conditions.
- Because of position, wealth, role, or relationships, there are some circumstances in which a person's Circle of Influence is larger than his or her Circle of Concern. This situation reflects on a self-inflicted emotional myopia – another reactive selfish life-style focused in the Circle of Concern.

3.1.8 Direct, Indirect, and No Control

- The problems we face fall in one of three areas:
 - direct control (problems involving our own behavior);
 - indirect control (problems involving other people's behavior);
 - or no control (problems we can do nothing about, such as our past or situational realities).

- – Direct control problems are solved by working on our habits since they are within our Circle of Influence. See “Private Victories”.
- Indirect control problems are solved by changing our methods of influence. These are the “Public Victories”
- No control problems involve taking the responsibility to smile, to genuinely and peacefully accept these problems and learn to live with them, even though we don’t like them.
- Changing our habits, changing our methods of influence and changing the way we see our no control problems are all within our Circle of Influence.

3.1.9 Expanding Circle of Influence

- It is inspiring to realize that in choosing our response to circumstance, we powerfully affect our circumstance.
- This man focused on his Circle of Influence. He was treated like a gofer, also. But he would do more than what was expected. He anticipated the president’s need. He read with empathy the president’s underlying concern, so when he presented information, he also gave his analysis and his recommendations based on that analysis.
- There are some people who interpret “proactive” to mean pushy, aggressive, or insensitive; but that isn’t the case at all. Proactive people aren’t pushy. They’re smart, they’re value driven, they read reality, and they know what’s needed.

3.1.10 The “Have’s” and the “Be’s”

- One way to determine which circle our concern is in is to distinguish between the have’s and the be’s.
 - The Circle of Concern is filled with the have’s.
 - The Circle of Influence is filled with the be’s.
- Anytime we think the problem is “out there,” that thought is the problem. We empower what’s out there to control us. The change paradigm is “outside-in” – what’s out there has to change before we can change.
- The proactive approach is to change from the Inside-Out: to be different, and by being different, to effect positive change in what’s out there – I can be more resourceful, I can be more diligent, I can be more creative, I can be more cooperative.
- It is so much easier to blame other people, conditioning, or conditions for our own stagnant situation. But we are responsible – “response-able” – to control our lives and to powerfully influence our circumstances by working on be, on what we are.
- If I really want to improve my situation, I can work on the one thing over which I have control – myself.
- As proactive people, we can carry our own physical or social weather with us. We can be happy and accept those things that at present we can't control, while we focus our efforts on the things that we can.

3.1.11 The Other End of the Stick

- Before we totally shift our life focus to our Circle of Influence, we need to consider two things in our Circle of Concern that merit deeper thought – consequences and mistakes.
- While we are free to choose our actions, we are not free to choose the consequences of those actions. Consequences are governed by natural law.
- Our behavior is governed by principles. Living in harmony with them brings positive consequences; violating them brings negative consequences. We are free to choose our response in any situation, but in doing so, we choose the attendant consequence. “When we pick up one end of the stick, we pick up the other.”
- Sometimes our choices have brought consequences we would rather have lived without. If we had the choice to make over again, we would make it differently. We call these choices mistakes, and they are the second thing that merits our deeper thought.
- For those filled with regret, perhaps the most needful exercise of proactivity is to realize that past mistakes are also out there in the Circle of Concern. We can't recall them, we can't undo them, we can't control the consequences that came as a result.
- The proactive approach to a mistake is to acknowledge it instantly, correct it, and learn from it.
- But not to acknowledge a mistake, not to correct it and learn from it, is a mistake of a different order. It usually puts a person on a self-deceiving, self-justifying path, often involving rationalization (rational lies) to self and to others. This second mistake, this cover-up, empowers the first, giving it disproportionate importance, and causes far deeper injury to self.

3.1.12 Making and Keeping Commitments

- At the very heart of our Circle of Influence is our ability to make and keep commitments and promises. The commitments we make to ourselves and to others, and our integrity to those commitments, is the essence and clearest manifestation of our proactivity.
- It is also the essence of our growth. Through our human endowments of self-awareness and conscience, we become conscious of areas of weakness, areas for improvement, areas of talent that could be developed, areas that need to be changed or eliminated from our lives.
- Then, as we recognize and use our imagination and independent will to act on that awareness – making promises, setting goals, and being true to them – we build the strength of character, the being, that makes possible every other positive thing in our lives.
- It is here that we find two ways to put ourselves in control of our lives immediately.
 - We can make a promise – and keep it.
 - Or we can set a goal – and work to achieve it.
- As we make and keep commitments, even small commitments, we begin to establish an inner integrity that gives us the awareness of self-control and the courage and strength to accept more of the responsibility for our own lives. By making and keeping promises to ourselves and others, little by little, our honor becomes greater than our moods.

- The power to make and keep commitments to ourselves is the essence of developing the basic habits of effectiveness.

3.1.13 Proactivity: the Thirty-Day Test

- I would challenge you to test the principle of proactivity for 30 days. Simply try it and see what happens.
- For 30 days work only in your Circle of Influence.
 - Make small commitments and keep them.
 - Be a light, not a judge. Be a model, not a critic. Look at the weaknesses of others with compassion, not accusation. The issue is your own chosen response to the situation and what you should be doing.
 - Be part of the solution, not part of the problem.
- We are responsible for our own effectiveness, for our own happiness, and ultimately, I would say, for most of our circumstances.
- Knowing that we are responsible – “response-able” – is fundamental to effectiveness and to every other habit of effectiveness we will discuss.

3.2 Habit 2: Begin with the End in Mind – Principles of Personal Leadership

3.2.1 What It Means

- To Begin with the End in Mind means to start with a clear understanding of your destination. It means to know where you’re going so that you better understand where you are now and so that the steps you take are always in the right direction.
- How different our lives are when we really know what is deeply important to us, and, keeping that picture in mind, we manage ourselves each day to be and to do what really matters most.
- We may be very busy, we may be very efficient, but we will also be truly effective only when we Begin with the End in Mind.

3.2.2 All Things are Created Twice

- “Begin with the End in Mind” is based on the principle that all things are created twice.
 - There’s a mental or first creation,
 - and a physical or second creation to all things.
- The carpenter’s rule is “measure twice, cut once.” You have to make sure that the blueprint, the first creation, is really what you want, that you’ve thought everything through. Then you put it into bricks and mortar. Each day you go to the construction shed and pull out the blueprint to get marching orders for the day. You Begin with the End in Mind.

- The same is true with parenting.
- To the extent to which we understand the principle of two creations and accept the responsibility for both, we act within and enlarge the borders of our Circle of Influence.

To the extent to which we do not operate in harmony with this principle and take charge of the first creation, we diminish it.

3.2.3 By Design Or Default

- Not all first creations are by conscious design.
- In our personal lives, if we do not develop our own self-awareness and become responsible for first creations, we empower other people and circumstances outside our Circle of Influence to shape much of our lives by default.
- Whether we are aware of it or not, whether we are in control of it or not, there is a first creation to every part of our lives.

We are either the second creation of our own proactive design, or we are the second creation of other people's agendas, of circumstances, or of past habits.

- Habit 1 says, “You are the creator.” Habit 2 is the first creation.

3.2.4 Leadership And Management – the Two Creations

- Habit 2 is based on principles of personal leadership.
 - Leadership is the first creation.
 - Management is the second creation, which we'll discuss in the chapter on Habit 3. But leadership has to come first.
- “Management is doing things right; leadership is doing the right things.”
 - Management is a bottom-line focus.
 - Leadership deals with the top line.

Management is efficiency in climbing the ladder of success; leadership determines whether the ladder is leaning against the right wall.

- We are more in need of a vision or designation and a compass (a set of principles or directions) and less in need of a road map.
- Effectiveness – often even survival – does not depend solely on how much effort we expend, but on whether or not the effort we expend is in the right jungle. And the metamorphosis taking place in most every industry and profession demands leadership first and management second.
- Efficient management without effective leadership is, as one individual phrased it, “like straightening deck chairs on the Titanic.” No management success can compensate for failure in leadership. But leadership is hard because we're often caught in a man- agement paradigm.

In management paradigm, one often thinks of control, efficiency, and rules instead of direction, purpose, and family feeling.

- And leadership is even more lacking in our personal lives. We're into managing with efficiency, setting and achieving goals before we have even clarified our values.

3.2.5 Rescripting: Become Your Own First Creator

- The two additional unique human endowments that enable us to expand our proactivity and to exercise personal leadership in our lives are imagination and conscience.
- Through imagination, we can visualize the uncreated worlds of potential that lie within us.

Through conscience, we can come in contact with universal laws or principles with our own singular talents and avenues of contribution, and with the personal guidelines within which we can most effectively develop them.

- Because we already live with many scripts that have been handed to us, the process of writing our own script is actually more a process of "rescripting," or Paradigm Shifting – of changing some of the basic paradigms that we already have.
- In developing our own self-awareness many of us discover ineffective scripts, deeply embedded habits that are totally unworthy of us, totally incongruent with the things we really value in life.

Habit 2 says we don't have to live with those scripts.

We are response-able to use our imagination and creativity to write new ones that are more effective, more congruent with our deepest values and with the correct principles that give our values meaning.

- To Begin with the End in Mind means to approach my role as a parent, as well as my other roles in life, with my values and directions clear.

It also means to begin each day with those values firmly in mind. I don't have to react to the emotion, the circumstance. I can be truly proactive, value driven, because my values are clear.
